Town Buried, 20 Believed Dead in Flood In Midwest

Mississippi River Hits Record Crest At Quincy, Breaks Levee at 5 Points

Hannibal, Mo., June 8 (AP).—The rain-swollen Mississippi River and its Iowa tributary, the Des Moines River, presented a picture of death and destruction today as one town was completely inundated and communities from Ottumwa, Iowa, to Louisiana, Mo., were partially submerged.

At Ottumwa, Herschel Loveless, in charge of rescue operations, estimated the death toll would reach 20. No deaths were reported along the Mississippi.

Floods took 11 lives in Iowa alone. Six additional flood deaths occurred in Canton, Ohio; (2) The Dalles, Oreg.; Gregory, S. Dak.; Bethany, Mo., and Mansfield, Ohio.

Five levees, between the mouth of the Des Moines and St. Louis, gave way and covered an estimated 16,000 acres of farmland and the town of Alexandria, Mo.

10 Feet Deep in Streets

Water was 8 to 10 feet deep in the town's streets just a few hours after the approximately 630 persons who live there left for shelter at nearby Wayland.

Farther south, at Canton, Mo., more than half the town was under water where 600 persons had been made homeless Thursday night.

All railroad traffic between St. Louis and Burlington, Iowa, was halted and highways along the river and across it at Quincy and Alexandria were closed by the high water.

The municipal hydroelectric plant at Ottumwa was still threatened as the receding flood waters began cutting away the foundations from under the plant.

All-Time High Reached

At Quincy, the Mississippi reached an all-time high of 23.6 feet, six-tenths of a foot above the previous high of 23 feet during the 1944 floods.

In the Far West, at the Dalles, Oreg., farm workers searched for missing relatives in the wake of flash floods which took at least one life Saturday. Two persons were missing after an eight-foot wall of water coursed down a narrow canyon. Cloudbursts, hail and a windstorm ruined at least 5000 acres of sugar beets on the Washington-Oregon border.

A tornado which zig-zagged through eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania Saturday killed at least five persons and partly wrecked almost a dozen towns. Hardest hit was Sharon, Pa., with all homes in a 15-block residential area damaged. The tornado also struck Ravenna, Deforrest, Warren, Youngstown and Niles, Ohio, and Farrell, Mercer and Grove City, Pa.

Two persons were drowned in swollen creek waters at Canton, Ohio.

The business district of Arcadia, Kans., was struck Saturday by a small tornado, but there were no deaths, and damage was not of major proportions. Homes were damaged and crops battered in a hail and windstorm at Chanute, Kans.

Storms Lash District Area For 3d Day

Thundershowers Add To Swollen Creeks; Damage Set at Million

Washington had its third day of thunderstorms yesterday.

One storm, the center of which passed west of the city about 4:30 p. m., sent hundreds of outdoor enthusiasts scurrying for shelter.

Another thundershower passed over the city about 6 p. m.

Both of the storms were moderate compared to Saturday night's three-hour torrential downpour. They added to creeks and runs already swollen, in some cases, over their banks.

Saturday Damages Heavy

The Saturday night storm, a survey yesterday disclosed, may have caused upward of one million dollars damage in the Washington area.

In Hagerstown, Md., where dozens of roofs were lifted in a six-block downtown area, the damage may reach the one-million-dollar figure, an official said.

Twenty-five Hagerstown houses were reported damaged, hundreds of trees uprooted, scores of parked cars struck and damaged by wind-blown debris.

The damaged roofs included those of St. John's Lutheran Church and its adjoining parsonage, both damaged by a roof torn from a nearby building.

Flash floods, followed the Saturday night storm, caused unestimated damage to streets and highways in Alexandria and Arlington County. A secondary road bridge in Groveton, Fairfax County, was reported washed out. Farm crops in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties suffered "considerable" damage.

Hundreds of basements were flooded in both Alexandria and Arlington.

French Mobilize Motor Transport In Rail Strike

Paris, June 8 (AP).—The French dug in today for a long siege against the railroad strike by organizing a network of motorized transport among major cities.

Buses and private cars were mobilized, some with army drivers, to carry passengers at third-class rates to destinations in all corners of the country. The rail strike, which started Friday after union leaders failed to agree with the ministry of transportation over workers' demands for wage increases and job reclassifications, was complete except for a few minor lines in the provinces.

Although the strike has not affected food supply, it appears only a matter of time before it slows down the nation's industrial plants. The big channel port of Boulogne was closed, and shiploads of coal and other essentials were stranded in Cherbourg. In the north, 53 trainloads of coal were halted by strikers.

U. S., Britain Rebuked on Petkov Arrest

Bulgaria Bluntly Declares Matter Is 'Pure Home Question'

(From Press Dispatches)

The Bulgarian government yesterday told the United States and Britain that the arrest of opposition leader Nikolai Petkov "is a pure Bulgarian home question."

That was Communist Premier Georgi Dimitrov's reply to American Representative John Horner and British Representative Sturndale Bennett when the two asked him for information.

The two representatives "implied that the question may have international significance," said the Bulgarian communique which announced the meeting.

Dimitrov's answer to the Anglo-American inquiry echoed similar sentiments as expressed by two other Balkan figures over the weekend.

The latest national of a defeated enemy power to tell the United States that the internal affairs of the small states in Europe are not United States business was Count Michael Karolyi of Hungary.

Karolyi Criticizes U. S.

Count Karolyi, who was Premier and President of Hungary after World War I, and who handed over his government to the Soviet regime of Bela Kun in 1919 (which developed into a reign of terror), declared that the United States was "backing the wrong horse" in Hungary.

In an interview with George Pipal of the United Press in Prague, Czechoslovakia, Karolyi said:

"You preach America for Americans and have a Monroe Doctrine. The same should apply to Europe. Yet America considers the Bolshevik danger so great that when anything approaching a new European system is attempted, she backs her enemies of barely 24 hours before."

Karolyi's remarks were made only 24 hours after pro-Communist Premier Lajos Dinnyes of Hungary told a press conference that Hungary would take an independent path free of outside influence but in close collaboration with Russia.

The remarks of Dimitrov, Karolyi and Dinnyes came as Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia and Premier Petru Groza met in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, and agreed on the necessity for deeper cooperation.

Communist Drive Intensifying

These developments were viewed in London as indicating a steadily intensifying Communist drive to consolidate strength and to embarrass the western Allies before peace treaties go into effect and cause the withdrawal of Russian occupation troops from Axis satellite countries.

Homer Jenks, who reports for the United Press from London, said diplomatic circles there believe Groza's visit to Tito may foreshadow an attempt to form a formal or informal pro-Russian "Balkan Federation" of Yugoslavia, Albania, Bulgaria and Romania.

Jenks said British circles be-

Truman Flies Back to Capital, Canadian Visit Starts Today

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman was back in Washington today after a four-hour flight from Kansas City, where he spent three joyful days with his old friends of the 35th Division.

His stay here will be brief. Today, with Mrs. Truman and their daughter, Margaret, the President will leave by rail for a four-day trip to Ottawa.

The correspondents who went with Mr. Truman to Kansas City and most of whom will go with him to Ottawa, will have even less time at home. Scheduled to arrive at National Airport ahead of the Sacred Cow, which arrived at 3:55 E. D. T., they actually were set down at 9:40 last night. Then, through some mysterious protocol involving a boarding ladder, they remained in the sweltering Constellation while it taxied down the field to the Air Transport Command building and disgorged them at 10:20.

When they reported at Kansas City's Municipal Airport yesterday morning ready to take off immediately after the Sacred Cow, they were told the Constellation which brought them there had developed engine trouble. Another Connie was flown to Kansas City from Washington and finally had them airborne at 4 p. m. Central time (6 p. m. Washington time).

The big airplane, loaded with 49 correspondents and members of the White House staff, roared over National Airport here exactly at 9 p. m. The weather aloft was brilliantly clear, but the airport and part of the adjacent countryside lay under a blanket of fog. After flying down to Chesapeake Bay and doing lazy eights for awhile, the airplane flew back to Washington, slipped through a hole in the clouds and landed.

In front of the terminal, correspondents and the other passengers teetered above the 15-foot gap separating them from the ground while some argument developed about bringing up a ladder to get

Aroused by Red Coup

House Resolution Demands That Russia Keep Pledges

By Alex H. Singleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aroused by the latest Soviet moves in Eastern Europe, the House Foreign Affairs Committee has called up for action a resolution demanding that Russia keep its wartime pledges and insisting upon a "firm" American policy.

The resolution had lain dormant since Representative Colmer (D., Miss.) of the committee introduced it earlier this session. But on the heels of the Communist coup in Hungary, committee members announced to a reporter yesterday that it has been set for public hearings.

The hearings are scheduled tentatively to start Wednesday. Among those likely to be called to testify are Secretary of State Marshall, Secretary of Commerce Harriman, former ambassador to Moscow; Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army chief of staff, and former President Herbert Hoover.

The resolution would record the attitude of Congress in strong terms without specifically binding the Administration. But from responsible sources it was learned that Colmer has discussed the move with President Truman, Harriman and State Department officials.

The resolution declares that certain nations have displayed an "unfriendly attitude" toward the United States. No countries are named, but Colmer said he means Russia and the Soviet satellites. He declared the time has come for a showdown to chart the world on a path of peace or a "muscle-flexing" display of power.

Protesting what he called a "curious paradox" of aid to countries dominated by Communist governments, Colmer told an interviewer that "if we are going to fight totalitarianism, we've got to fight it on all fronts instead of appeasing with one hand and boxing with the other."

He said the hearings—among other things—will be aimed at finding out "just how many Russians there are in this country" and declared that "it is high time this

The Post Poll

76% in District Favor Year's Training for Youths, 17 to 21

Seventy-six per cent of Washingtonians think all young men between the ages of 17 and 21 should be required by law to take a year of military training during peacetime.

This was reported by The Post Poll which interviewed a representative cross-section of people living in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Only 20 per cent of local residents are opposed to universal military training. The remaining 4 per cent are undecided, the poll showed.

The finding gives evidence of strong public support for the recommendation of President Truman's Universal Training Advisory Commission. The poll was taken before action by the commission, which stated last week that universal military training is an essential element of national security and foreign policy.

Washingtonians apparently differ little from the country as a whole on this issue. The Gallup Poll in February, 1947, reported that 72 per cent of the American public favors universal military training.

Local residents were asked by Post pollers:

"Do you think all young men between the ages of 17 and 21 should be required by law to take a year of military training during peacetime?"

Here are their answers:

YES, in favor of universal military training, 76 per cent.

NO, not in favor of universal military training, 20 per cent.

UNDECIDED, 4 per cent.

No significant differences in opinion were found between men and women, various age groups, or various educational groups.

Veterans, and people with close relatives who are veterans, differ little in opinion from people in families with no veterans.

More than a quarter of those opposed to universal military training said that training should be placed on a volunteer basis. Some others were opposed on the grounds that compulsory military training interferes with a young man's schooling, and that the Army is a bad influence on young men. A few said they were opposed to the proposal because it would lead to a militaristic form of government.

Sixty per cent of those favoring universal training are convinced it would be good for the young men in many ways—physically, psychologically and educationally. But only 42 per cent mentioned the military necessity of building up an Army in case of future wars.

Loan Agencies, U. S. to Tackle Farm Inflation

Truman Conference On High Land Prices Opens Here Today

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Government officials and farm loan agencies will meet here today to seek a way to halt recent wild increases in farm land prices.

About 100 insurance company heads, federal land bank officials, farm loan investors and farmer organization officers have been summoned to today's meeting by President Truman.

Among those attending will be State officials of both Maryland and Virginia, where recent increases in farm prices have been among the largest in the country, and far greater than the national average.

Average Rise 92%

Farm land prices throughout the Nation now average 92 per cent above the 1935-1939 price levels, President Truman said, in calling the conference.

In Virginia, Government records show, the increase has been 111 per cent. In Maryland it has been 102 per cent.

Both States are among the 24 States in which Mr. Truman on May 20 declared "real estate values are now above the inflationary peak of 1920."

Both are believed to be included among the areas where the President declared "farms are selling at prices which cannot be sustained by probable long-time farm earnings."

Among those who are to take part in today's meeting in the Agriculture Department auditorium are Gen. Omar N. Bradley, head of the Veterans' Administration, Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve System, Dr. Edwin G. Nourse of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

Represents Veteran Angle

Bradley's inclusion indicates Mr. Truman's worry that the present form of inflation may prove disastrous to veterans investing in farms.

The report quoted by President Truman indicating a rise in farm prices of 92 per cent above the 1935-39 average, showed the following in nearby land prices:

Maryland land that sold for $91 an acre in 1935, and $100 in 1940, is now selling at $196 an acre.

Virginia land that brought $97 an acre in 1935, or $112 in 1940, now commands $225 an acre.

A Bureau of Agricultural Economics survey of "Real Estate Activity in 17 Appalachian Counties," of which 4 were in Virginia and 2 in West Virginia, and the remainder in three other States, stated:

"Farm values in Virginia were a little more than double those prevailing before the war." In West Virginia they had increased about two-thirds.

"Farm real estate values in these States increased about 15 per cent

Washington State

GOP Defeats 'Wallace' Democrat

Olympia, Wash., June 8 (AP).—A Republican who upheld the Truman foreign policy defeated a "progressive Democrat" backed by Henry Wallace to win the vacant U. S. House seat in Washington State's Third District yesterday.

In a close, hotly contested special election watched throughout the country as a possible indicator of 1948 political sentiment, Republican Russell V. Mack had a margin of slightly more than 1,500 votes over former U. S. Representative Charles Savage.

The vote in 573 of the district's 607 precincts gave Mack 32,449 votes to 30,939 for his Democratic opponent.

Returns from the 34 small, unreported precincts could not affect the outcome, and Mack's supporters predicted he would get better than an even break in the nine-county district's 1768 absentee ballots.

Savage refused to take a direct stand on the Truman-Wallace foreign policy controversy.

Mack said in a statement he understood his election "to mean that the people of the district are solidly back of our Nation's bipartisan policy."

Democratic State Chairman Earl Coe, who supported Savage, also said in a statement that Mack's victory "clearly indicates that the people are in favor of a Truman program.

Wallace campaigned personally for Savage, saying he had "a splendid progressive record—one of the best of any Congressman in the United States."

Mack, 55 years old, will fill the the post of the late Fred Norman, Republican. He said he would work for the President's foreign policy, for "legitimate rights" of labor and for "sensible Federal appropriations" for Western reclamation and power projects.

Savage, loser to Norman by 7000 votes in the 1946 election, predicted that the Democrats had a definite chance for a victory in 1948.

Kem Insists Senate Probe 'Whitewash'

Hits Justice Dept. 'Failure' to Act in Alleged Vote Frauds

By The Associated Press

Senator Kem (R., Mo.) insisted yesterday that the Senate press an investigation "to find out who ordered the whitewash" in a Justice Department inquiry into reported frauds in a Kansas City election.

Attorney General Clark denounced the "whitewash" charge as untrue when Kem leveled it at the department in a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee hearing last Thursday.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of the subcommittee, announced he is prepared to recommend tomorrow that the Senate approve Kem's resolution for a complete investigation into what the Missourian called the department's "failure to investigate and failure to prosecute" in the alleged irregularities.

The disputed election was held last August. Representative Roger Slaughter (D.) of the Missouri Fifth Congressional District lost his bid for renomination to Enos Axtell, who had President Truman's backing. Axtell, in turn, was defeated in the general election by Albert L. Reeves, jr., a Republican.

Grand Jury Held Unwarranted

The Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted a preliminary investigation last fall into charges that numerous frauds and irregularities occurred in the election. The FBI inquiry was based on information turned up by the Kansas City Star, and on interviews with election judges.

District Attorney Sam Wear summarized the FBI's report and asked three Federal district judges whether they thought the information warranted calling a Federal

GOP Assails Truman as Champion Of Spending

Aroused by Charge Of Security Peril, Leaders Vow More Budget Trimming

By Milton Magruder
United Press Staff Writer

Congressional Republicans, aroused by President Truman's charge that their economy drive endangers national security, countered last night that he is advocating reckless spending "reminiscent of the New Deal at its height."

They renewed their pledge to trim off "every ounce of fat" from his $37,500,000,000 spending budget for fiscal year 1948 despite Mr. Truman's warning that their efforts to date may sap the Nation's strength and undermine its position as a world leader for peace.

The House thus far has knocked $3,300,000,000 from Mr. Truman's projected expenditures—or a little more than half of the six billion dollar goal set by its GOP leaders last January.

Senate Republicans have set $4,500,000,000 as a "reasonable savings target" but at least one Democrat, Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, says they will be doing well to trim away two billion dollars.

Cites 2 House Slashes

The President, speaking to a Nation-wide radio audience Saturday night, objected particularly to House cuts of 43 and 28 per cent, respectively, in appropriations for the Interior and Agriculture Departments. He argued that:

1. The cut of $138,581,907 to $156,838,513 in Interior funds would put conservation, reclamation and power programs "back to the level of a decade ago" at a time when full development of natural resources is essential to the Nation's economic strength.

2. The cut of $340,869,342 to $848,001,976 in Agriculture funds was an attempt to "undermine our entire farm program."

"I sincerely hope that, on careful reflection and consideration," he said, "the Congress will provide the appropriations necessary for these projects and services which are designed to provide a better, fuller life for our people and a more stable, productive economy for our Nation."

Not Because He Asked It

Senate Republicans said that some of the Agriculture and Interior Department funds will be restored by the Senate—but not in the amount Mr. Truman considers "essential" and not because he asked for such action.

Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) said his Senate Appropriations Committee probably will "give some" on the deep cuts voted by the House but that "generally speaking, we will go along in the economy drive."

He expressed concern about the "tremendously crowded" Senate appropriations calender, but hoped that all of the pending bills could be passed by July 15 and clear the way for adjournment the latter part of next month. Thus far, the Senate has approved only 1947 deficiency appropriations and 1948 supply bills for the Postoffice, Labor and Treasury Departments and the Federal Security Administration. It still must act on the House-approved Agriculture, Interior, Commerce and Justice bills as well as the Navy and War Department

Boy, 6, Admits Killing 2 Babies In Hospital

Massillon, Ohio, June 8 (U.P.).—A 6-year-old patient at Massillon City Hospital has admitted that he took two infant girls from their cribs in the pediatric ward and dropped them on the floor Friday night before they were found with their heads bashed in, police said today.

Police said they were skeptical of his story.

The patient told conflicting stories and there still was no explanation of why he had taken the babies—Diana Brand, 8 weeks old, and Rosemary Morton, 9 weeks old—from their cribs. Police refused to disclose his name for the time being.

However, a high city official said that the patient said he had pulled the babies through the bars of their cribs. Then he dropped them to the floor, an accident that easily could be fatal for babies that age.

Rigorous Training Planned

Civilian 'Commando' Units Will Guard Atom Installations

Denver, June 8 (AP).—Recruiting of a uniformed atomic energy security force, trained in Commando tactics, to guard Western atomic energy installations will begin tomorrow.

Several hundred security inspectors will replace soldiers at Los Alamos, N. Mex., and "other localities in the western half of the United States," C. L. Edwards, director of the Thirteenth U. S. Civil Service Region, said.

In Washington, an Atomic Energy Commission representative said the changeover from military to civilian guards will be made gradually to bring the security force to a strength comparable to that in wartime.

He said the Army has been unable to provide sufficient troops and the commission feels it can maintain a continuous strength force with civilians.

Prospective applicants—between 21 and 35 years—were warned in a Civil Service notice that they will be "subjected to physical danger and protracted hours of work . . . in severe climatic conditions and high altitudes."

Those who pass written, oral and medical examinations and investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as to their "loyalty, character and associates" will be given approximately one year of training "equivalent to that given Commando units of the armed forces."

Applications will be received until June 23 and Edwards said ap-

GAO Investigator Plunges To Death From Calvert Bridge

A 59-year-old General Accounting Office investigator plunged to his death at 4:40 p. m. yesterday from Calvert Street Bridge over Rock Creek pkwy.

From papers found on his crushed body, he was identified as Milward Frost, 3641 39th st. nw. He was employed in the GAO's field investigation section.

Dr. Charles Wirth of Emergency Hospital staff pronounced him dead on the scene.

His wife, Mrs. Mae Frost, told police he had left their McLean Gardens apartment about 3 p. m., without indicating his destination. She said he had been in poor health for several years, and had been a patient at Mount Alto Hospital about a year ago.

Frost was a veteran of World War I. Besides a GAO identification card, police found on the body a number of Statler Hotel credit cards which he apparently used in his work.

Police found the body on Beech dr., immediately below the bridge. The coat to Frost's blue suit was found on the bridge.

The body was removed to District Morgue. Police said it was raining at the time of the jump and no witnesses could be found.

Frost, neighbors said, is survived by his wife and two daughters by a former marriage. They said he was an ardent gardener as a hobby and had carried on numerous cross fertilization experiments with his garden plants.

It's a Long Way From Legislative 'Act' to Enactment Into Law

Bill Is 'Act' When It Goes To President

By Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

So, you've been thinking right along President Truman is getting an income tax reduction bill and a labor bill from Congress.

It's true, but only in a strictly nontechnical way. Call them bills, and you're using a nickname. Might as well use it, everybody does.

Technically they are "Acts." It says so in their headlines. Also, they are physically very handsome documents, printed on heavy parchment paper, with a border of two thin red lines surrounding the clear black type.

The tax bill, first one introduced in the House this year, is at the White House awaiting the President's decision. The labor bill cleared its final congressional hurdle with Senate approval Friday. It is slated to reach the White House today, after it is signed by House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) and President Pro Tem. of the Senate Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.).

Twisted Course

A bill on its way to becoming an act follows a twisted course. It leads through miles of congressional corridors, past mountains of paper, over oceans of words. In places real red tape marks the official route.

A bill is a piece of paper that says there ought to be a law. The Eightieth Congress has received more than 5000 bills this year.

They are supplied by the members of Congress. In turn, members get the bills from assorted sources. They may prepare their own, with the help of the Capitol's expert bill writers. They may get bills from private individuals or groups. A bill may come from any part of the executive branch of the Government.

Introduction Is Simple

First step in shooting the bill into the legislative mill is to introduce it. In the House, a member introduces a bill by drifting past the east end of the clerk's desk in front of the Speaker, and dropping the bill into a wooden box there; called the "hopper."

A Senator introduces a bill by rising and announcing that he is sending his bill to the desk.

Right away official work starts on the bill. First step is a decision on what committee shall handle the bill. The decision is usually automatic, dictated by carefully drawn rules on what type of bills go to what committees. Tough decisions are made by the presiding officer in either House.

The bill then goes, not to the committee, but to clerks who make a record of the title and give the bill a number. Nightly the day's collection of bills is packed off to the Government Printing Office. Next morning, normally, batches of all the new bills are in the House and Senate document rooms.

These rooms are the sources of supply for members, committees and others.

First to Subcommittee

A bill's first step in a committee is usually a step down to a subcommittee. It's the subcommittee that ordinarily calls for people to come and tell what they want done with the bill.

These public hearings may be handled by the full—in contrast to sub—committee. This is the rule with a bill of major public interest like the labor and tax bills.

After hearings, committees and subcommittees make their decisions in executive meetings—public and press are excluded. The members meet by themselves or with only technical advisors present. In these meetings, what is to be done with the bill is decided by voting.

A subcommittee may approve, change, or kill a bill. Killing can be done by a vote, or by inaction. Approval, with or without change sends the bill to the full committee. There the same choices of action are open. Approval sends the bill to the House.

Minor bills, unopposed, take a short cut. They are collected, listed on a calendar, and when a batch is ready they are cleared by unanimous consent. The method has a risk—a single member can block action.

Major bills make a side-trip in the House to the Rules Committee. Sometimes it's a one-way trip. Other times the Rules Committee approves a little resolution saying how long the bill is to be discussed, and other details of how the bill is to be handled on the floor. That resolution is open to debate. If it is adopted, the bill then comes up for debate, amendment, and finally a vote that approves or turns it down. The rule feature is not followed in the Senate where unlimited debate is a tradition.

Approval in either House turns a bill into an Act—but it still goes by the familiar nickname. Approval also touches off a flurry of behind-the-scenes activity. The House's final version is printed on light blue paper, and a copy is made official with the signature of Clerk John Andrews. Senate acts are printed on white paper, and carry the signature of Senate Secretary Carl A. Loeffler.

Must Get Together

The house which passes a bill sends its official version to the other chamber.

There it is normally treated like a strange new bill—running through the same legislative gauntlet of being sent to a committee, subcommittee, hearings executive sessions, and back to the floor for action.

Senate approval of a House bill and House approval of a Senate bill finishes the job in Congress only if both chambers have used exactly the same language.

With major bills, the second chamber generally changes the bill written by the first. When that happens the bill goes to a conference between representatives of the two houses. They discuss, in executive session, the parts of the House and Senate bills that differ. Language voted by both Houses is not subject to change. Normally, each group agrees to drop some parts of its bill, in return for keeping other parts. Compromise language may be used to settle disputed parts.

When they agree on what is to be done, they make their recommendations in a conference report. Their plan goes back to each house. Each must approve the conference report to complete action on the bill. Continued disputes may send bills back to repeated conferences.

After passage, it becomes the business of the house where the bill was introduced to get the Act to the President.

All through Congress the bill had numbered lines, for easier reference when amendments were being made. Pages were stapled together to form a book. For the final "enrolled" copy, numbers are omitted, large single sheets are used, printing is on only one side of a sheet.

The official copy is signed by both the Speaker of the House and President Pro-tem of the Senate.

It is delivered to the White House nad promptly goes into the safe. Duplicate copies—without the signatures—are distributed via the Budget Bureau to Government agencies. The Budget Bureau inspects the measure to see it conforms with the President's fiscal program. The Justice Department reviews it for legal and constitutional points. Other affected agencies review it. Their reports clear again through the Budget Bureau, and the bill is returned to the White House with a recommendation for or against approval.

If the President signs the official copy, it becomes law. If he won't sign it, the bill is returned to the house that sent it to him. If both houses vote for the bill again wih a two thirds majority, the bill becomes a law without the President's signature.

Whichever way it becomes law, the official copy lands finally at the State Department where it receives a law number and is filed. Copies are printed at the Government Printing Office. A bill by Act of Congress has become a law.

AN ACT

To reduce individual income tax payments.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Individual Income Tax Reduction Act of 1947"

SEC. 2. REDUCTION IN NORMAL TAX AND SURTAX ON INDIVIDUALS.

(a) REDUCTION IN NORMAL TAX ON INDIVIDUALS.—Section 11 of the Internal Revenue Code (relating to the normal tax on individuals) is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 11. NORMAL TAX ON INDIVIDUALS.

"There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of every individual a normal tax determined by computing a tentative normal tax of 5 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of the credits against net income provided in section 25, and by reducing such tentative normal tax as provided in section 12 (g). For alternative tax which may be elected if adjusted gross income is less than $5,000, see Supplement T."

(b) REDUCTION IN SURTAX ON INDIVIDUALS.—Section 12 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code (relating to the rate of surtax on individuals) is hereby amended by striking out "by 5 per centum thereof" and inserting in lieu thereof "as provided in subsection (g) of this section".

(c) REDUCTION OF TENTATIVE NORMAL TAX AND TENTATIVE SURTAX.—Section 12 (g) of the Internal Revenue Code is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(g) REDUCTION OF TENTATIVE NORMAL TAX AND TENTATIVE SURTAX.—

"(1) In the case of taxable years beginning after December 31, 1947, the combined normal tax and surtax under section 11 and subsection (b) of this section shall be the aggregate of the tentative normal tax and tentative surtax, reduced as follows:

If the aggregate is:	The reduction shall be:
Not over $2000	5½% of the aggregate
Over $2000 but not over $8718.17	$110
Over $8718.17 but not over $200,000	30% of the aggregate
Over $200,000 but not over $500,000	$54,000, plus 15½% of excess over $200,000
Over $500,000	$92,850, plus 10% of excess over $500,000

AN ACT

To amend the National Labor Relations Act, to provide additional facilities for the mediation of labor disputes affecting commerce, to equalize legal responsibilities of labor organizations and employers, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SHORT TITLE AND DECLARATION OF POLICY

SECTION 1. (a) This Act may be cited as the "Labor Management Relations Act, 1947".

(b) Industrial strife which interferes with the normal flow of commerce and with the full production of articles and commodities for commerce, can be avoided or substantially minimized if employers, employees, and labor organizations each recognize under law one another's legitimate rights in their relations with each other, and above all recognize under law that neither party has any right in its relations with any other to engage in acts or practices which jeopardize the public health, safety, or interest.

It is the purpose and policy of this Act, in order to promote the full flow of commerce, to prescribe the legitimate rights of both employees and employers in their relations affecting commerce, to provide orderly and peaceful procedures for preventing the interference by either with the legitimate rights of the other, to protect the rights of individual employees in their relations with labor organizations whose activities affect commerce, to define and prescribe practices on the part of labor and management which affect commerce and are inimical to the general welfare, and to protect the rights of the public in connection with labor disputes affecting commerce.

TITLE I—AMENDMENT OF NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS ACT

SEC. 101. The National Labor Relations Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"FINDINGS AND POLICIES

"SECTION 1. The denial by some employers of the right of employees to organize and the refusal by some employers to accept the procedure of collective bargaining lead to strikes and other forms of industrial Today, bill goes to White House.

Radar Equipment Free To Schools With Ex-GIs

By The Associated Press

The Federal Works Administration said yesterday it will distribute 13 million dollars worth of electronic equipment—including three radar stations and 118 radar transmitters—to colleges, universities and some secondary schools.

It will be distributed free to institutions having veterans programs, but the schools must pay the shipping costs from Akron, Ohio.

SPECIAL NOTICES

Greek Red Leader Would End 'War'

On Atom Control

Reds Move To End U. N. Stalemate

Lake Success, N. Y., June 8 (AP).—A move aimed at breaking the long stalemate over international control of atomic energy in the United Nations appeared likely.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko requested a full meeting of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission for Wednesday.

Soviet sources said Gromyko would offer new proposals of "substance."

The Security Council scheduled more debate on a global police force Tuesday and the U. N. Inquiry Commission on Palestine prepared to leave for the Holy Land Wednesday.

U. S., Britain Are Rebuked

lieve that Hungary, although not classed as a Balkan country, might well be included, in view of the Communist coup there.

The Associated Press and United Press, which reported the Bulgarian reply to the Western allies' representations over the arrest of Petkov, said the Bulgarian communique declared that "Petkov, as are all the rest of Bulgarian citizens, is subordinated to Bulgarian laws only."

The communique advised the public "patiently and calmly wait and see the decision of the Bulgarian sovereign court."

On his way to his jail cell Friday, Petkov told reporters his arrest was "nothing but a prolongation of what already has happened in Hungary."

'Plot' Declared Defeated

What happened in Hungary, according to Karolyi, was the defeat of a plot by "people who wanted to overthrow the actual Hungarian regime and set up an ersatz Horthy dictatorship.

"There is no doubt," Karolyi told the United Press, "that a conspiracy existed and was promoted by people who collaborated with the Horthy Fascists allied with the Axis during the war."

Admiral Nicholas Horthy, wartime regent, brought Hungary into the war as an ally of Germany.

Karolyn declared: "The greatest danger to Hungary is not communism but the danger of falling back into the hands of the people who misgoverned it for 25 years. There is no danger of Russia trying to Bolshevize Europe," he continued. "What she does want is to make sure she is not surrounded by enemies. You incredibly underestimate your own country and power if you think Russia, bled white by war, is a military threat."

The United States State Department has already announced that it intends to sent a strong note to Soviet Russia on the events in Hungary.

British Support Probable

Jenks reported from London that Britain is studying the proposed note and probably will support it. The United States, Britain and Russia control Hungary although the country is occupied solely by Russian troops.

Britain is awaiting a reply from Russian Gen. V. P. Sviridov, commandant in Hungary, to its second demand for documents pertaining to the alleged conspiracy which resulted in the ousting of Premier Nagy.

The Moscow radio, which has consistently defended the events in Hungary and Bulgaria, today was quoted by International News Service as announcing that Bulgarian newspapers charged that Petkov "with the aid of home and foreign reactionaries, prepared by armed force to overthrow the fatherland front" in Bulgaria.

These charges of interference in internal affairs gave a curious twist to to an article in the Moscow monthly magazine, "World Economy and World Politics," as reported by the United Press.

Wrote political commentator Ivan Lemon: formation of a third party in the United States by Progressives" is an "especially urgent necessity."

Priorities Set Up For Jap Reparations

Tokyo, June 8 (U.P.).—Allied headquarters today released a State Department directive outlining the priority to be followed in removing Japanese plants and industrial equipment for reparations.

The first factories and equipment to be turned over to other Allied powers will be those owned by "Zaibatsu," the huge family combine.

Plants and equipment owned by other Japanese nationals, the Japanese government, and allies of Japan were listed as having second priority.

Third priority was given to the property of citizens of United Nations members.

Democratic Regime And Amnesty Urged By Partsalides

By M. W. Fodor
Post Reporter

Athens, June 8.—What are the views of the Communists concerning a solution of the present crisis in Greece? This question I addressed to Dimitrios Partsalides, secretary-general of E. A. M. (the political committee of the Greek National Liberation Front), and a member of the Greek Communist Political Bureau who, after the deaths of John Zevgos and George Siantos, is the outstanding leader of the Communist Party of Greece.

"Our policy is simple. An end should be put to the civil war; a government should be formed by the parties which respect the principle of the people's sovereignty. There ought to be a general political amnesty, which could cast oblivion on the past. The army, the machinery of the state and the security corps ought to be purged from Fascist elements. A real democratic regime should be established; the electoral lists must be revised or recompiled. As to the external aspects—(and here showed itself the Communist hoof)—Greece ought to be considered a neutral country within the framework of U. N.," said Partsalides.

I asked him whether he saw any chance or hope for such a development. Partsalides answered that for the time being there was no chance on the horizon for such a policy, but sooner or later the situation will force such a solution. "We cannot foretell the phases of the struggle, but we know that such proposals can take Greece out of the present impasse."

Naturally he also said that following the "American intervention in Greece's affairs the situation has deteriorated—this because the American intervention encouraged those forces who want to eliminate the popular democratic trend." Partsalides added: "We witness a total war against the people in which all forces of the state—army, navy and air—are involved. Under such conditions no rehabilitation is possible. On the contrary, this is only creating new grievances. But the foreigners and the former German collaborators will not attain their aims—the war against fascism is going to be continued. The Greek pepole feel sure that ultimately they will be able to impose their own will. Already the failure of the regime, originating from the March 31 elections of last year, is forcing the people toward a policy which E. A. M. originally initiated."

Apartment Zoning To Be Discussed By Citizen Group

Apartment zoning for a tract of land at Georgia and Luzerne aves., Silver Spring, Md., will be discussed at a special meeting of the North Woodside-Montgomery Hills Citizens Association.

The meeting was called for 8 p. m. Wednesday at the Woodlin School by President G. Harris White. Members will determine the stand to be taken by the association.

The area surrounding the site for which apartment zoning has been asked by the owner, Mrs. Fred M. Dickinson, is zoned for detached residential housing, but commercial zoning is in existence about 100 yards north at Seminary rd.

A public hearing on the petition will be held at 2:30 p. m. June 17 at the Rockville Courthouse.

Vinson Accepts Society Honor

Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson has accepted honorary membership in the George Washington University Chapter of the Order of the Coif, national honor society, it was announced yesterday.

15,000 Suspects Arrested

Munich, Germany, June 8 (U.P.).—United States War Crimes Investigation officials reported today that 15,000 war crimes suspects have been arrested in Germany during the past two years and another 4000 to 5000 have been held as witnesses.

Almost 1000 Germans have been convicted of war crimes and another 1000 are being held for trial by special American courts. The other 13,000 were turned over to German authorities for prosecution.

Typical Cats Like Fluffy Might Take a Lesson From the Abercrombie-Miller Roof-Sitter

SELF INTERVIEW—Fluffy talks over her experience with the aid of a mirror and a reflection of herself

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

A small bit of cat named Fluffy caused a cat-sized flurry yesterday when it got curious about stoves and fell down a chimney.

Cats, however, are in the habit of doing things like that, so you might call Fluffy a typical Washington cat.

But police, and others in the habit of rescuing frightened felines, may be interested to know, however, that there is a cat on a roof hereabouts they'll never have to coax down.

This cat, who unfortunately is nameless, lives at 2201 Massachusetts ave. nw. and has been sitting quietly, uncatlike for the past 40 years.

The only thing he has been causing is speculation among the neighbors as to (1) How he got there, and (2) Why he got there.

These questions were answered yesterday by members of the family of the late Comdr. Frederick Abercrombie-Miller, who had the huse built in 1899.

The architect was Paul J. Pelz, who also designed the Library of Congress. Pelz thought the Abercrombie-Miller town house needed something in the way of a gargoyle where now sits the cat.

He confided this to Commander Abercrombie-Miller when the latter was in his office one day with his small son, Charles Abercrombie-Miller. It was Charles, really, who is responsible for the cat. Charles thought it would be a good deal nicer to have a cat, something like Pelz's office cat, than a gargoyle.

The young Abercrombie-Miller's whim was faithfully executed by Pelz, who had a plaster model made of his cat—now the untroublesome and untroubled cat at 2201 Massachusetts ave nw.

And Fluffy? Well, the police of Number 1 Rescue Squad got Fluffy out of the chimney, all right, yesterday. Fluffy fell from the third floor to the basement at 1726 15th st. nw. while investigating the stove. And police had to pike-pole and crow-bar a hole through the chimney bricks in the basement before Fluffy emerged.

There ought to be a moral in this somewhere.

should be put on a basis of reciprocity or ended."

Colmer's resolution would declare that:

1. "No settlement of lend-lease accounts should be made that does not fulfill in full the conditions of the Lend-Lease Act."

2. "All aid in any form" to governments which have failed to carry out their commitments to the United States made since passage of the Lend-Lease Act should end.

3. "An end should be made to all loans from the United States to those governments which have failed to carry out their political agreements with the United States."

4. "The Government should take appropriate administrative action" to insure screening and control of "all contacts made with these governments by citizens and others within the jurisdiction of the United States including those for the acquisition of technical processes, engineering and other skills, and the production 'know-how' of industrial processes . . . and in particular those items which might facilitate the production of weapons of mass destruction."

5. "A complete reciprocity of treatment should be afforded to other nations by the United States in the matter of entry into the United States of agents or other nationals of such nations and their access to our industrial plants."

6. "The United States should support only such a carrying out of the Potsdam Agreement as genuinely protects the complete freedom of elections in the whole of former enemy countries and prevent the stripping of such countries through excessive reparations."

7. Congress "pledges its support to the President in the execution of the foregoing policies" and for "a firm policy of protecting international law and right and all other true national interests of the United States."

8. "The leaders of other governments throughout the world should be advised that it is and will be the primary objective of the policy of the United States to secure and maintain a just and lasting peace for a free world."

Reich Officials Hit for Unity Talk Refusal

Berlin, June 8 (AP).—The two Soviet-controlled newspapers which are the main Communist voices in Germany lashed out today at the German official heading the western zones for refusing to discuss political unity of Germany at last week's Munich conference.

But in Munich, these officials—the Ministers-President of the American, British and French zones—expressed dismay at the action of the Soviet zone ministers in walking out of the conference and voiced a hope the differences would be overcome.

Saar Line Revised

Paris, June 8 (AP).—The French announced today that for economic reasons they had revised the Saar frontier to place the town of Saarburg, 12 miles southwest of Treves, (Trier), in French territory. The move was described as temporary, pending signing of the German peace treaty.

them down. The argument was ended when the Connie's four engines were cranked up again and the big ship taxied to the ATC terminal where a ramp materialized at once and the passengers finally got on the ground, six hours behind the President.

At Kansas City, Mr. Truman was in fine humor as he reached the airport, joking with the correspondents about their predicament and offering them one of the engines from the Cow.

"Or I'll let you fly on the wings," he suggested. "Plenty of room up there and kind of airish."

The President answered a reporter's plea that he "don't leave for Canada without us" with a quip:

"Oh, I won't. I'll keep the train waiting for you."

He had left his apartment at the Muehlbach Hotel at 5:57 a. m. (Kansas City time) for a quick visit to his mother at Grandview, Mo. On his return he said he had found her feeling very well, "even better than yesterday." During his stay in Kansas City, Mr. Truman made daily visits to his mother who, in spite of her 94 years, has made an astonishing rally from a critical illness.

Back here the President was confronted with two controversial bills, on labor and tax reduction, which await his signature or veto. He declined to give "any inkling" of what action he might take, but in Kansas City, Press Secretary Charles G. Ross had said he probably would wait until after his return from Canada before making his position known.

"Charlie's guess," Mr. Truman said yesterday, "is as good as anybody's. I'm not going to give you an inkling of what I'm going to do or when."

The labor measure will not reach his desk until today, at least.

With him on the return trip were Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Admiral William D. Leahy, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, his military aide; Capt. Clark Clifford, his naval aide, and Ross.

6 Give Reasons for Favoring Year of Military Training

Residents interviewed by The Post Poll were assured their names and opinions would not be divulged. Comments presented here were obtained in spot interviews in the downtown area.

"A strong defense is the best weapon against enemy attack," in the opinion of Eugene Frischman, assistant field director, claims service, American Red Cross.

Frishmann

Explaining why he favors a year of peacetime military training for men between the ages of 17 and 21, he declared:

"It seems to me the only way we can assure peace is by having a strong Army which would inevitably force the aggressor nations to think twice before becoming over-aggressive."

Frishman, who lives at 770 Princeton pl. nw., said peacetime training will tend to make America a nation of healthier people, and may help to combat juvenile delinquency.

* * * *

A Gold Star Mother with another son serving in the Navy in Hawaii favors training because she believes the military life is a healthy one.

Mrs. Macon

Mrs. E. C. Macon of 514 Seward sq. se., feels that military training gives young men an opportunity to learn a craft, improve their health, and become responsible, mature citizens.

An employe of the small vessel sales division of the Maritime Commission, Mrs. Macon said she feels that knowledge gained from a year of military training would help young men find a suitable job afterwards.

* * * *

Aubry Cox, a Veterans' Administration clerk and Navy veteran, said that a year's military training would have been of benefit to him before his Navy service.

Cox

"Most European countries have some sort of military conscription," he said, "and particularly in these unsettled times it's necessary to give training to as many men as possible. We should be prepared now because there may be no time to train them if we have another world war."

Cox, who lives at 4216 7th st. nw., feels also that military training would help young men improve their health, learn a trade, and become more mature.

"With world conditions so unsettled, it's best to be prepared," declared Bill Schuirmann, a civilian employe of the Marine Corps Terminal Leave Division, who lives at 3513 Idaho ave. nw.

Schuirmann

Schuirmann cited a geopolitical survey made last year which predicted that by 1970 Russia's fighting age manpower would nearly equal that of the United States, England, France, Germany, and Italy combined.

However, if we have an efficient military corps we have nothing to fear, said Schuirmann.

C. Henley, a member of the United States Special Police, Federal Works Agency, feels that military training "is an education within itself."

Henley

The physical and educational training men get in the services makes them healthier and better equipped for life, he said.

"Also, if we give men military training during peacetime, we wouldn't be caught unprepared in case of war. Unpreparedness only prolongs war and costs men's lives needlessly," he said. Henley lives at 3574 13th st. nw.

Because we were unprepared we gave Hitler the chance to start World War II," said Dr. Anna Neumann, a physician, who lives at 3109 Buena Vista ter. se.

Dr. Neumann

Dr. Neumann feels that the United Nations is not succeeding in settling world problems because the nations of the world aren't ready for it, she said.

Military training here is a necessity, she feels, because there will always be people who think the only way to settle problems is by force.

Lebanese Editors Plan 'Boycott' of Assembly

Beirut, Lebanon, June 8 (AP).—Lebanese newspaper editors, in a joint letter to President Bechara el Khoury, said the present National Assembly "discredits the state," announced they would no longer cover its sessions, and urged its dissolution.

The letter said in part:

"It becomes notorious that the Assembly which issued from the elections of May 25 does not represent the Lebanese nation. The success of a large number of members was due, as is well known, to falsification and fraud, which none dares to deny. The maintenance of such an Assembly discredits the state" . . .

Iran to Buy Here

Tehran, Iran, June 8 (AP).—The Iranian government said today that two Iranian officers of its gendarmerie would leave soon for the United States to purchase five million dollars' worth of "army equipment, clothes and boots" for the gendarmerie.

appropriations which represent the largest and hardest-to-cut sections of the White House budget.

Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) of the Senate GOP Policy Committee and Chairman Eugene D. Milliken (D., Colo) of the Finance Committee said they considered four billion dollars as a "reasonable savings target."

But George, a leading fiscal expert, disputed this.

"They are conceding that they will restore some of the funds knocked out by the House," he said. "And the House drive is only about 30 per cent successful to date, with the only major bill coming up being that for the Veterans' Administration. There won't be any serious deductions in that one."

Bridges said his committee would check closely on the House cuts in Army-Navy funds in view of the "many implications" of present foreign problems. The House voted to cut Army funds by $435,809,077 and lopped $377,519,000 off Navy appropriations.

"We can't gamble too much with increasing tension of the international situation and increasing Communist threats of aggression, with first one country and then another being swallowed up," he said.

He said the President had gone beyond his budget recommendations in his Kansas City speech to "advocate new projects that would cost a great deal of the taxpayers' money."

"The spending proposals are reminiscent of the New Deal at its height," he added.

He said the committee would review "vital" reclamation projects with care and that those considered essential "will be cared for adequately."

Senator Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.), said the President had merely stated "objectives which every fair-minded Republican wants to see achieved."

"What we are concerned with primarily is the method of achieving them," he said. "The Republicans think it can be done by lifting some of the burden of excessive taxation by eliminating unnecessary Government spending."

Millikin said some revisions and "additions" would be made in the Interior and Agriculture budgets but that they would be small in proportion to the "huge sums involved."

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) conceded that a shortage of national resources was a pressing problem, but said he favored a "go slow" approach to solving it through Government spending. He laid part of the blame on the Administration, saying it should have advocated continuation of the wartime teamwork for production instead of "suggesting that we cut hours."

Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebraska) declared that reclamation projects have suffered from Mr. Truman's order of last year "freezing" 85 million dollars previously authorized by Congress. He said the Senate will see to it that those which "have merit" are not held up by a lack of appropriations.

The Republican stand was backed by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), a long-time advocate of Government economy.

"I am hopeful that a substantial part of the House cuts will be enacted by the Senate," he said. "I believe that this will be possible."

Others Go Down the Line

But other Senate Democrats commenting on the economy picture, went down the line with Mr. Truman.

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) said that "good faith and honesty" 'dictates restoring the House cuts in Agriculture funds; that cuts in the military budget were "unexplainable with the international situation going from bad to worse."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said the President was "quite right" in contending that the nation should "concentrate upon stimulating production and development of our national resources."

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) thought Mr. Truman was "charting a progressive and liberal course." He said the Republicans were "trying to wreck the economic and financial resources of our farmers," and, in cutting funds for school lunch programs, were "trying to take food from the mouths of needy children."

China Officials Quit Mukden, Peiping Hears

Peiping, June 8 (AP).—Chinese government officials were reported quitting Mukden today in fear of an imminent Communist assault, and an unconfirmed dispatch said Nationalist troops had pulled out of Antung, important railway city on the Korean frontier.

The report of reversals south of Mukden came as government sources asserted successful counter-attacks north of the city had swept the Communists from 45 miles of the railway to Changchun, Manchuria's capital.

Foreign travelers arriving in Peiping said the situation within Mukden was "grave" with the garrison expecting the Communists.

Gen. Tsao Chih-siang, chief of staff of the Manchurian command, was heard broadcasting to Mukden residents that the city was strongly defended and they should remain calm.

The progovernment Hsin Min Pao reported the withdrawal from Antung, describing it as a "strategic retreat."

grand jury. They told him they did not. However, the judges all said in testifying before the subcommittee Friday that they had not read the FBI report itself when they delivered their recommendation to Wear.

Kem told a reporter he believes the Senate should check subordinates in Clark's office to find why an exhaustive, first-hand investigation was not conducted. He said that Clark had described the preliminary probe as a "lengthy and detailed" and a "full" investigation, in letters to him.

240 Sent to Prisons

Kem said the Federal anti-conspiracy statutes—the socalled "Ku Klux" laws passed shortly after the War Between the States—were sufficient to send 240 Kansas Cityans to Federal prisons or reformatories in 1936 in another election case.

"When the Department of Justice was given the green light by Homer Cummings in 1936, they went out and did their stuff, and people soon were on the way to the penitentiary," he said.

"Now when Tom Clark doesn't give the green light, nothing has been done, and much of the evidence is gone forever."

He referred to the recent theft of some of the disputed ballots from the Kansas City election board vaults.

Chairman Wiley (R., Wis.) of the Judiciary Committee declared the Justice Department officials should be given a full opportunity to explain their actions in the case.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican whip, said that if the committee finds it has a basis for an investigation it ought to go into it thoroughly.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) demanded a full-scale investigation of the conduct of Clark.

Sanitary Plan Meeting Slated

An open discussion of a proposed new sanitary district in Fairfax County will be held at the Annandale Elementary School Wednesday at 8 p. m. by the Annandale Businessmen's Association.

Speakers will be G. Hubard Massey, County consulting engineer, Burns N. Gibson, Falls Church representative on the county board of supervisors and a representative of the Federal Housing Authority.

The proposed sanitary district would include the area around Annandale, and would provide for water and sewerage facilities to replace the present system of wells and septic tanks.

Lets 'Pop' Do it When Water, Chemical Fail

Kane, Pa., June 8 (AP).—When smoke poured from the hood of George Stroup's car here, rescuers rushed to help. One volunteer sprayed the fire with contents of a chemical "fire bomb." A second threw a pail of water on the blaze. Nothing happened.

Then a third man stepped up, shaking a bottle of soft drink he had been holding. With thumb over the bottle's mouth, he squirted the contents on the fire. The blaze was out in seconds.

Army Upheld In General Amnesty Ban

By The Associated Press

The War Department clemency board reported last night that well over half of the wartime military prisoners now have been freed and upheld the Army in not granting a general amnesty as soon as the war ended.

This would have been "unfair to the great body of soldiers who fulfilled their obligations with honor," said the board of civilians and officers headed by Owen J. Roberts, retired Supreme Court justice.

The board, making its final report, said that more than 68 per cent of the 34,766 military prisoners under confinement in October 1945 have now been unconditionally released and many others are on home parole.

Created two years ago after charges had arisen of too-harsh punishment, the clemency board reviewed 28,717 cases.

Undersecretary of War Kenneth C. Royall, commenting on the report, said that "not only had excessive sentences been reduced and sentences for similar offenses and offenders equalized but that, in addition, a great many men had been restored to duty with an opportunity to earn an honorable discharge."

The Roberts board said:

"The median sentence for wartime absence without leave after clemency action has been 3.4 years, and for desertion five years.

(The report did not explain its word "median" but dictionaries define it, in its statistical application, as that point in a series which leaves half the individuals in the series of one side and half on the other. For example, if five soldiers drew sentences of three, four, five, seven and 11 years respectively, the median would be five though the average would be six.)

"With the substantial allowances of time off for good conduct in confinement, which amounts to nearly one third of the average sentence, and the possibility of parole after service of one third of a sentence, it is clear that the War Department has dealt fairly with military offenders."

The report said the number of soldiers in Federal prisons and disciplinary barracks has fallen from a high of 34,766 in October, 1945, to 14,228 on April 30, 1947, including 10,906 who committed their offenses before VJ-Day.

During the war and through December 31, 1946, about 84,000 men were sentenced to confinement by general court-martial, but by that date about 42,000 had been restored to duty with an opportunity to earn honorable discharge and 26,000 had been released through clemency, parole and expiration of sentence.

The report noted that during the war about 30 per cent of the offenders were convicted of offenses commonly recognized as crimes in civil courts and 70 per cent were convicted of military offenses.

Of the 70 per cent who were military offenders, 27 per cent were convicted of absence without leave and 28 per cent of desertion.

The remaining 15 per cent were convicted of other military offenses such as disobeying or striking superiors, violations of arrest or confinement, misbehavior before the enemy, and riot.

Navy Lines Up 121 Ships for Latin America

By The Associated Press

The Navy is ready to transfer four cruisers and 117 smaller vessels to Latin American nations, officials disclosed yesterday if Congress approves President Truman's hemisphere arms standardization program.

The Navy has earmarked two light cruisers for Brazil and one each for Chile and Peru. The total of 121 vessels to be transferred includes 37 wartime combat ships now valued at $9,286,570 and 84 noncombat ships at $11,828,450. The combat ships besides the four cruisers are 33 destroyer escorts.

Secretary of the Naval Ferrestal has estimated in a memorandum to the State Department that this $21,115,020 would be the full cost of the Navy's share of the program. The memorandum says the Navy now is spending $15,628.09 a month to maintain the ships that would be transferred.

The War Department previously had estimated that it would cost about 10 million dollars a year to standardize the weapons of the Latin American republics and Canada with those of the United States and train the other nation's soldiers, sailors and airmen here.

Under the plan, sent to Congress by the President, the United States could:

1. Transfer arms, ammunition and implements to the other nations of the New World.
2. Train the soldiers, sailors and airmen of the American republics in methods used by the United States.
3. Maintain, repair and rehabilitate their planes, tanks, guns and ships.

The objective is to give the land, sea and air forces of the Western Hempishere identical weapons, organization and training.

Among the 84 noncombat ships to be used in standardizing the sea forces of the hemisphere are mine layers, tugs, tankers and minesweepers. Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Ecuador, Mexico, Peru and Paraguay have been listed to receive them.

Under the terms of the legislation asked by Mr. Truman, the United States could give, sell or transfer the equipment to the Latin American nations and Canada on whatever terms the President deemed advisable.

Taft Doubtful on S. A. Aid

Atlantic City, N. J., June 8 (AP).—Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio) said today he was "sympathetic to arguments" opposing American military aid to South American nations.

Taft, here to address presidents of State medical associations, said he was "impressed" by a letter from Col. R. B. Creager, national Republican committeeman from Texas, which, noting a plan by President Truman to extend military aid to South American nations, said:

"Latin-American revolutions have in the past and in the main been fairly tame affairs, but arm and equip them and their revolutions will cease to be opera bouffe (comic opera) . . . We are strengthening the power of existing dictators."

Taft said American attitude toward South America was an "incidental feature of our foreign policy."

He continued:

"There never has been a bipartisan policy on South America any more than there has been a bipartisan policy on China or any other part of the Orient.

Taft said Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) has declared bipartisan policy to be "confined to Europe and the United Nations."

Welles Urges Definite Stand On Palestine

By The Associated Press

Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, said last night the final solution by the United Nations of the Palestine question will depend upon the position taken by the United States but that definite American policy has not been disclosed.

Welles, for his weekly WOL-Mutual broadcast, said he expects the United States and Russia will "work together for a Palestine settlement in a spirit of cooperation that is altogether distinct from the growing antagonism" on other European problems.

Although no specific position has been announced by this country regarding Palestine, Welles said, the general "pronouncements" made by this Government during the past 25 years is similar in general to Russia's latest announced policy.

Welles said the present economic structure in Palestine would be destroyed under any kind of Soviet Communism. He reported the Communist vote in the latest election there represented only a "tiny minority."

He recalled that Russia proposed two solutions—creation of a bi-national state with Jews and Arabs enjoying equal rights, or partition to establish two independent states.

He urged the United States to take an "equally clear cut" position.

Land Parley Opens Today

during the year ending March 1, 1947.

"This compares with an increase of only 18 per cent in farm income.

The volume of sales of farm land in 1946 was 17 per cent above 1945, the report says. However, it was 67 per cent above 1941.

This increase in sales, Government officials assert, indicates a growing speculation in farm lands.

Mortgage debts on these Appalachian farms now totals about 64 per cent of the present high farm values. In 1941 they averaged only about 61 per cent of the then comparatively low values.

Secretary Anderson today is expected to urge private loan agencies to bear down on farm loans from now on. He will ask insurance companies and other lending agencies, it is reported, to follow the Government's lead in farm financing.

Government-controlled Federal land banks now refuse to lend more than 65 per cent of what they term "normal agricultural value of a farm."

This value is defined as the amount a prudent farmer would be willing to pay in the expectation of average production and normal prices for farm commidities.

Normal prices are defined as those which may be expected over a long period in the future—a period reasonably free from inflation or depression.

Present farm products prices are slightly more than double those which Government lending institutions consider normal. They are 150 per cent above the more nearly normal prewar (1935-39) level.

Government surveys show many farms are being sold today on the basis of their earning capacity in terms of present abnormally high prices rather than in terms of normal prices.

DPs Must Have Help, Gen. McNarney Says

Wernersville, Pa., June 8 (U.P.).—Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, former commander of U. S. forces in the European Theater, told a conference of the United Jewish Appeal today that living conditions of displaced European Jews must be improved or they will create incidents with the Germans or U. S. troops.

McNarney's speech was read for him by Chaplain Herbert Friedman of Denver after the general, scheduled to fly her, was grounded by bad weather at New York.

"Food, clothing and medical supplies must be obtained on at least their present level," McNarney said. "A human being can stand just so much and then there comes the straw that breaks the camel's back. We must prevent that last straw from being added to their burden."

Man in Genoa Says He Posted 'Letter Bombs' for Stern Gang

By Carlo Massaro

Genoa, June 8 (AP).—A man who described himself as a member of the Stern Gang, Jewish underground organization, said today that he personally had mailed 24 "letter bombs" to prominent Britons from the central postoffice of Turin.

He said one was addressed to King George of Britain.

I talked with the man, who is about 40 and calls himself Ami Kam, just before he left Genoa for—he said—Athens.

"Kam" said the explosives missives were of yellow manila-type paper. Each, he said, contained exactly 190 grams of explosive, enough, when permitted contact with the air, to kill the opener of the envelope.

I met the man by chance in Genoa's central station. We had met before five months ago when he visited a Genoa newspaper office to tell about the Jewish underground work.

He said no more letter bombs would be sent because the system had become too well known. He added:

"We now are going to work with other systems.

"The English believe the Stern Gang is composed of only 200 men," he said contemptuously. "We let them believe it. But we have our men throughout Europe and throughout the world. We are an important force and we will fight the British everywhere in Europe as well as in Palestine."

"We mean to bring down the Union Jack," he said.

Irgun Has Doubts

Jerusalem, June 8.—Favorable reaction on President Truman's appeal to Americans not to encourage violence in Palestine was expressed today by the Jewish agency and left and liberal sections of the Hebrew press, but Irgun Zvai Leumi, the stronger of the two dissident underground forces, issued a reproachful statement that hinted that Washington was more interested in oil than in Jewish freedom.

After thanking "millions of Americans" for their loyal support, Irgun said: "But our struggle is not dependent on external factors. Whatever their (Americans) attitude may be, we shall continue to fight for the liberation of our country and the redemption of our people. We are determined never again to be the passive victims of international intrigues. We shall not go down through the abyss for the sake of oil."

Va. Retailers Will Convene In Alexandria

Retail merchants of Alexandria will be hosts to the forty-first annual convention of the Virginia Retail Merchants Association tomorrow and Wednesday at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria.

More than 200 delegates, representing 21 associations, will attend the convention, first in Alexandria in more than a decade. Joseph Phillips, Alexandria, is in charge of arrangements.

The vanguard of delegates will arrive today to participate in the two preconvention meetings—a luncheon for secretaries of local associations at noon and a dinner meeting of the State board of directors at 7 p. m.

Scheduled for discussion during the two-day business session, according to Charles B. McFee, jr., managing director, are public opinion and research, credit, training and a proposed Virginia sales tax. New State officers will be elected Wednesday.

Among speakers will be Herbert Nachman, Newport News, president of the State association, and two past presidents, S. I. Davis of Staunton, and C. Page Waller, of Alexandria.

Funds Hearing Set Tomorrow

Public hearing on the proposed Montgomery County, Md., budget will be held at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Rockville Courthouse.

A large turnout of civic leaders and school supporters is expected at the hearing, to urge restoration of a $400,000 cut in the school budget.

Other residents favoring increased police pay and other county salary increases also are expected to be heard.

The County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations has been active in calling for restoration of the school fund cut. The County Charter Committee, the League of Women Voters and other large groups have spoken in favor of restoring the cut.

It is expected that the budget will be discussed at the meeting of the Montgomery County Civic Federation tonight.

The tentative budget given Montgomery County commissioners provided for a 38-cent increase in the county real estate tax rate to meet a $5,696,711 budget. The present tax of $1.50 per $100 will be increased to $1.88 but a 3-cent decrease in the suburban district tax will reduce the actual increase by that amount.

If the school, police, health and other increases are returned to the budget, an increase in this tax rate will be necessary.

A State contribution to county funds of more than one million dollars reduced the expected rate increase by approximately 50 cents. Otherwise the rate would have had to be more than $2.

Tops Today — Tops tomorrow

White sidewall tires, as illustrated, will be supplied at extra cost as soon as available.

ONE thing's plain, any time you want to look today's highways over:

The car that catches your eye first — and holds it longest — is Buick. The car that pops out from the crowd with the prophetic look of a "fashion first" is this same neat and nimble number.

More than that — it's a beauty you could take to your heart, and hold for a long, long time.

Its size, its sturdy bulk, the hold its Fireball power takes on your fancy — all spell out a permanent attachment between you and this honey.

Its steadiness on the road, its feathery handling, the unmatched buoyant levelness of its all-coil springing ride add up to a fond affection you'll want to last forever.

And how does this square with things-to-come in car design?

Well, just ask yourself: Which car now on the road looks most like what you'd like all cars to be? Which departs most neatly from old patterns, stands out as the style most likely to succeed the others?

The answer's Buick — which leads logically to this:

Whenever your Buick comes, it's bound to be style-right, modern, fresh-looking. It's still going to show the way in looks, line and action to anything the next handful of years is likely to produce.

So next to a spot behind a Buick wheel, a spot on a Buick waiting list is the smartest place to be these days.

Why not put yourself there by getting your order in now — with or without a trade-in, and at no premium over established prices at time of delivery?

National Strength

It was an old thesis to which President Truman reverted in his speech to the Thirty-fifth Division reunion in Kansas City. "The will for peace without the strength for peace," he said, "is of no avail." The present-day reality is that the United States holds the key to world economic recovery as well as to political stability on the basis of democracy and freedom. Weakness or failure on our part would inevitably drain away whatever strength remains behind the idea of Western civilization.

Nor was the President speaking merely of military strength. More pointed, it seems to us, was his emphasis upon moral and economic strength. We must have the moral stamina to uphold "the principle on which world peace must rest." To uphold this principle we must necessarily aid other peoples who are struggling against adverse postwar conditions for the right to live under institutions of their own choosing, free from outside aggression, whenever it is feasible for us to do so. Adherence to that policy will be a severe test of our moral quality.

As for economic strength, it is quite evident that our international policy will be of little consequence unless we have resources, machinery, manpower and know-how to give effect to that policy in addition to satisfying the wants of our own people. Our economy must, as the President says, stay in high gear. It must also constantly redemonstrate to the world the greater advantages of the democratic way of life. Unlike the Soviet Union, we cannot reach out into a country in distress and take over control of its affairs by intrigue and dominant military power. Democracy has the hardest task in the world of constantly rejustifying its existence by the use of voluntary methods and the attainment of results which can withstand the scrutiny of free men.

Having given splendid emphasis to the necessity for political, economic and moral strength, however, the President weakened his case, in our opinion, by dropping down from this high plane to special pleading for restoration of funds cut out of the Administration's budget for fiscal 1948. We do not think that the expenditure of a fixed sum on reclamation projects or the payment of a fixed amount of benefits to farmers has any direct relationship to world peace or national security. Indeed, the very necessity of meeting our world obligations makes it imperative to trim some of the less pressing expenditures for domestic projects that can be postponed.

Mr. Truman spoke out for a national health program, broader social security benefits, housing and education programs. All these are highly desirable and must be sought as worthy national objectives, but there is also a problem of fiscal solvency that cannot be forgotten. We cannot enhance our national strength by ignoring the burdens which war and depression have left us in the form of a gigantic national debt or by undertaking far more worthy projects than we can hope to achieve. National strength implies a willingness to resist popular outlays which the Nation cannot afford as well as a defense system and an economy operating in high gear.

Training Support

Those persons in Congress and elsewhere who believe that universal military training is against the wishes of the people will find interesting reading in today's Post Poll. The tally indicates that 76 per cent of the residents of Washington and vicinity favor compulsory training for young men of 17-21. This closely echoes the Gallup Poll's finding that 72 per cent of the people of the country as a whole are on the side of military training. These figures should cause some sharp thinking. They suggest that universal training must be considered, along with unification of our armed forces, as an integral and vital part of our national security endeavors. Neither our over-all security plans nor unification itself will be completely effective without this backstop.

The one disturbing factor in The Post Poll results is the reasoning given by persons favoring military training. Sixty per cent felt that the training would be "good" for our young men, while only 46 per cent saw the military need. This indicates that the physical, educational and sociological aspects of universal training may have been oversold. The incidental benefits of such training, as illustrated in the Army's show-window experiment at Fort Knox, are important, but the fundamental purpose should be more fully understood. Justification for the program is to be found in simple military necessity. We are glad to note that the President's Advisory Commission headed by Dr. Karl T. Compton took this realistic view in its report recommending training.

Current Army enlistment figures are now below the number necessary to maintain the Army even at its present ineffectual level. We can never build up a substantial reserve through purely voluntary methods. Yet such a reserve has been described by our highest military authorities as the country's primary defense against atomic attack. The outcome of such an attack, General Eisenhower has said, probably would be determined in the first 60 days. Our ability to mobilize a large force quickly would have critical bearing on our retaliatory power. Men participating in the reserve program through universal training would not be combat-seasoned, but they would have a solid basis of military experience, and under universal training draft machinery would be instantly available. The knowledge that we had such a force would in itself be a strong deterrent to any potential aggressor.

Doubtless it would be difficult to hold adequate hearings on universal training in this session of Congress. But the strength of national support for such a measure illustrates clearly that it should be a "must" item on the agenda of the next session. Here we have an opportunity to prepare ourselves in advance of an emergency. In the atomic age, to wait until the cataclysm strikes is too late.

Federal Jobholders

On June 30, 1939, the number of Federal employes totaled 920,000; on June 30, 1945, 3,738,000; in April of this year, 2,204,000. Despite the sharp drop from the wartime peak, the number of civilians employed by the Government is still almost 2½ times the prewar figure. Furthermore, between the wartime peak and January, 1947, various departments and agencies chiefly concerned with peacetime activities added approximately 318,000 persons to their payrolls.

The Byrd Committee concludes on the basis of these findings that there "is still much unnecessary expenditure of Federal funds; agencies are overstaffed, which results not only in nonessential salaries but also nonessential expenditures for incidental items, such as space, heat, light, rent, travel and others." It adds that "if the budget is to be balanced the excess personnel must be separated from the payrolls first, then there must be improvement in procedure and methods of every phase of Government work so that every necessary function is more efficiently handled and all unnecessary duplicating functions abolished, thereby making it possible to further reduce personnel and yet perform satisfactorily."

Director of the Budget James E. Webb, who is a member of the Byrd Committee, agrees, of course, that excess personnel should be removed from the Government payroll. But he points out that a mere listing of the numbers employed by various agencies does not prove that they are overstaffed. The level of employment, he says, is dependent upon functions and governmental programs. Hence a thorough examination and adjustment or curtailment of governmental programs is the proper way to reduce expenditures. Arbitrary reduction of personnel, in his opinion, is likely to cause confusion and inefficiency instead of improvements in procedure and methods.

Logic is on the side of Budget Director Webb, for it is obvious that the amount of work to be done is the chief determinant of size of any working force, whether the employer happens to be the Federal Government or a private agency. The chief value of a roster of personnel broken down by departments, agencies and subdivisions is, so to speak, exploratory. It enables an economy-minded Congress to gain a rough idea of the changes in functional emphasis that have occurred over a period of years, and to discover what branches of the Government are carrying increased work loads. Armed with this information, the next step is to determine whether the expansion of functions indicated is desirable, and, if so, whether the resultant additions to personnel can be regarded as excessive.

Only a painstaking study of operations, department by department and agency by agency, will answer such questions. It might well be that some agencies which have reduced their personnel are overstaffed, while others that have increased their personnel may be understaffed. Certainly it would be rash to order extensive cuts in numbers employed before considering the effect on Government operations, although that has already been done in some instances.

It is also essential to an understanding of the situation to examine the changes in personnel agency by agency. It appears that the postwar expansion of personnel is largely confined to a few establishments, notably the Postoffice Department and the Veterans' Administration. The War Assets Administration also accounts for between 40,000 and 50,000 new employes since VJ-Day. It is worth noting, too, that some departments that have suffered most heavily from the economy ax, such as Agriculture and Interior, had fewer employes last April than in June, 1939. This is no proof that the projected cuts are too severe; it merely shows how rash it would be to base a case either for or against departmental budget-cutting on personnel data alone.

With new postwar agencies to be manned and old agencies taking on additional work, Congress ought to look first at programs and then determine how many employes are needed to carry out those programs effectively. We do not doubt that there is a great deal of dead wood that should be cleared out, but it would be folly to begin housecleaning without first taking an inventory to find out what can be cast away without hampering the running of the Government establishment.

Kansas City Scandals

The unwisdom of presidential intervention in local political contests is emphasized by the unsavory aftermath of the barren primary victory won by Enos Axtell, the President's candidate in the Fifth Missouri Congressional District. The defeat of Representative Slaughter for the Democratic renomination was widely hailed at the time as a tribute to the President's influence, calculated to raise his then waning political prestige. As a matter of fact, it was the Pendergast Kansas City machine that provided the needed support for the Truman candidate. To say the least it showed poor political judgment for the President to advertise his former connections with a corrupt local organization by teaming up with it to compass the downfall of a Congressman who had consistently opposed Administration policies. Having done so, it was inevitable that the President's reputation would suffer if the local machine resorted to fraud to insure the success of his candidate.

When evidence of such frauds was brought to light last year the Administration should have pursued the inquiry vigorously as the best possible defense against partisan attacks. Instead, the testimony of the FBI head, J. Edgar Hoover, before Senator Ferguson's Judiciary Subcommittee shows that the Department of Justice was content with a limited inquiry that resulted in a decision that no Federal statutes had been violated. The belated promise of Attorney General Clark to undertake a new and full investigation of fraud charges follows wholesale indictments of Kansas City election officials and workers by a county grand jury, needling by Senator Ferguson and charges of "whitewashing." Those charges are strongly supported by evidence accumulated without the aid of the Department of Justice and by the recent stealing of impounded primary ballot boxes from the Kansas City Election Board.

The Administration's only reasonable course is a searching investigation and courageous prosecution of the wrongdoers. President Truman has apparently decided to follow that course, since he declares that the investigation should be carried through to its logical conclusion, although he does not know whether the case calls for a Federal grand jury investigation. This declaration and the President's general denunciation of fraudulent voting as "one of the worst things that can happen in a democracy" would be much more impressive, however, if they had been uttered months ago before the heat was turned on his lieutenants.

Wasteful Policy

The incredible inefficiency of Congress in handling District problems has seldom been more pointedly illustrated than in the repeated slashing of public assistance funds. Last year the Board of Public Welfare asked for a substantial increase in relief funds on the ground that the number of cases would be increased by postwar unemployment of handicapped persons and marginal workers. Its estimates were slashed. When the caseload did increase, as forecast by the board, Congress found it necessary to go through the wasteful rigamarole of passing a deficiency appropriation. Now apparently the same hapless procedure is being repeated.

This year the board has put into effect a new budget guide which takes note of the fact that the cost of living has increased since 1942. There seems to be acceptance of the unquestioned fact that public assistance families as well as the rest of us have to pay the higher prices of today. But the board estimates that it will have to care for 11,820 persons in fiscal 1948 while the budget-makers slashed this estimate to 7595. Current experience is again proving the board to be right, and that leads Raymond F. Clapp, acting director of public welfare, to forecast another 20 per cent cut in relief grants to families, which would in turn leave Congress the alternative of passing a special deficiency bill once more or condemning hundreds of people to hunger.

Apparently Congressman Horan spouted off about not wanting any "drones" in the District even before waiting to hear the facts, for the hearing on this segment of the District budget begins this morning. Of course, it is not a question of supporting people who are able but not willing to work. Rather it is a question of enabling mothers with dependent children or families with an incapacitated breadwinner or persons who are only employable under emergency conditions to subsist on the meager fare that is provided through the Public Assistance Division. The least Congress can do is to make reasonable provision for the number of families and persons indicated to be in dire need by the experience of the Welfare Board. To appropriate only two thirds of the sum necessary and force the whole issue back into the overworked Congress again next winter is a course so utterly irresponsible and wasteful that we can scarcely believe it will be repeated.

WOMAN AT THE KEYBOARD

So lightly, like sparrows fluttering about their roosting tree, her fingers move over the keys, touch and leave, spin their unrest,
glide out to the unknown,
and back to the intimate chords, back to the flock's nearness, dance like a rush of wind shaking leaves, shaking branches, and move together to the resting chord, quiet, the day done, and night folding.

Accident Statistics

A news story in The Post of June 3 cites the Air Transport Association as quoting Government figures to the effect that there were 2.4 fatalities for every 100 million passenger miles traveled on railroads in 1945, and 2.5 fatalities on the commercial airlines. (Editor's note: Later these figures were disavowed by the Air Transport Association. The correct statistics are 0.16 for railroads and 2.5 for air lines.)

Statistical comparisons between accidents on railroads and on airplanes that are based on passenger miles traveled are very misleading, and I have often wondered why they are used. An airplane travels so many more miles than a train in the same length of time; yet it is the time during which the passenger is in the air or on the train that constitutes his exposure to accident hazards, not the number of miles he travels.

It seems to me that the best way to measure the relative frequency of accidents in different modes of travel is to use passenger-hours, not passenger-miles, as the basis for the comparisons. This method of measuring the frequency of work injuries in industrial establishments is standard usage; the frequency rate is arrived at by finding the number of injuries occurring for each million man-hours of employment.

If travel accident rates were based on passenger-hours of exposure to travel accident hazards, the frequency of travel casualties would be comparable for all types of travel, whether by air, rail, boat, motor vehicle, horse and buggy or ox cart.

Free World

Despite what General Eisenhower terms the "tragic, stupid folly" of war, despite the probably earnest attempts of peace lovers to form a "united" nations, despite the noble words of churchmen all over the globe, the fact remains that nowhere on this earth have we what we like to call freedom!

The United States, the "cradle of democracy," for whom? How can one man be free and not another in a democracy? It seems unbelievable that such a situation exists, yet here it is even in the Nation's Capital.

In Washington, if a man's skin is too dark he must watch where he eats, the church he attends, his cultural activities must not extend to the theater, he must be careful not to offend someone with a lighter skin. His occupation is confined to low economic levels and his schools are second rate at best. These are the material restrictions. There are others. If his nationality or religion differs from the majority he faces barriers more intangible but just as genuine. His children are taunted in the "free" public schools, he is spoken of in a condescending manner and ridiculed.

The real tragedy lies in the fact that the persecuted minorities do not learn from their own persecution. Time and time again one minority attacks another, verbally, economically and socially. The world will only be free when it is as free for everyone as it is for me!

Taxes And Inflation

Mr. Richard Seelye Jones, in his letter of June 4 on current income tax legislation, makes some points. He also commits a couple of errors.

He states that "purchasing power in the hands of the people affects inflation no more than the same power in the hands of Government." This is not so. Consumer and business spending, as any homeless Government economist can tell you, has a much more rapid influence on the direction of the price level.

Most Government expenditures go for services to business and consumers and for public works, both expenditure items being months removed from directly affecting the most important elements in inflation, the price of consumer goods. This lesson was learned during some unhappy days of New Deal planning when pump-priming or Government expenditures for goods and services was found not to possess the leverage on consumer goods production which the Government men had envisioned.

Mr. Jones' second error is his contempt for taxes as "a means of implementing a planned economy." Properly used, taxes can be most helpful in achieving the delicate balances needed to keep the free enterprise system in high gear. There is much danger entailed in a full-scaled planned economy, but, economics-wise, at least, it would be foolhardy to dismiss all Government operation in the economy as undesirable. There are times when free enterprise needs a surgeon instead of a faith-healer.

Two-Party System

Regardless of how conflicting or contradictory the application may be, both our liberals and conservatives use the term "the American way" to describe every phase of life in the United States which they happen to favor for the moment.

Recently, Secretary James Forrestal, speaking to the New York State Democrats, invoked this most popular slogan in defense of the two-party system. As we are functioning, supposedly, under a two-party government, it is presumed this particular application was meant as a rebuke to Henry Wallace for hinting at a third party "should the Democrats cease to be the liberal party."

The incident is a clear example of the prevailing confusion over what constitutes the American way. For, not very long before, the same Henry Wallace stood up and asked his Democratic colleagues to protect the two-party system from an insidious threat in the form of the deliberate breach of party lines by a block of Democrats who consistently vote with the Republicans.

Mr. Wallace called upon the members of this "shuttle" party to go over forhtrightly to the Republicans if they preferred that party's ways.

We do not know if Secretary Forrestal approved of a consummation so agreeable to the Democratic Coalescers, but he can aid his two-party crusade by joining with Mr. Wallace in a demand for two distinct, stable parties, promoting each its own principles and demanding loyalty to those principles from men who are elected under its platform.

German And Austrian Scholars

"We have committed ourselves to a program in which education plays a critical role. There must therefore be no turning back in our support of that program so vital to the enduring peace of the world."

In these words the United States education mission to Germany, in its official report, has called attention to "the significance of the educational program in Germany, not only for the Germans but for all the world." The mission emphasizes in particular "that political democracy can be developed to the full only by those who have the basic necessities of life."

The catastrophic nutritional situation now existing in Germany and Austria is well known. Its effect upon intellectuals is shown by the findings of the Hoover mission. Teachers, physicians and scientists are classified for ration distribution in the "normal consumer" group. A considerable part of this group is described by the Hoover report as being in a "deplorable condition." It is pointed out that the 1550 calories ration for the "normal consumer" is "wholly incapable of supporting health of the groups which do not have supplements." But within recent weeks the food available in many parts of Germany and Austria has dropped to an average of less than 1000 calories per capita.

The immediate effect of this situation on higher education in Germany and Austria is only too clear. The signers of this letter have recently been informed by the president of the University of Muenster (Germany) that in many German and Austrian universities professors have collapsed in the classroom. It is a shocking fact that the health of some of the most distinguished German and Austrian scholars has already been impaired by malnutrition to such an extent that their friends have expressed fear for their lives.

Upon these scholars rests the intellectual future of central Europe. Every man and woman now teaching in German and Austrian universities has been appointed with the approval of military government. If these scholars are now compelled to discontinue their work, the opportunity for a reconstruction of German education will be irretrievably lost.

To prevent this calamity, a group of members of the University of Chicago, headed by Chancellor Robert M. Hutchins, has initiated a drive in support of German and Austrian scholars. Through the Cooperative for American Remittances of Europe, we have been sending a number of CARE packages to each German and Austrian university. These packages are sent to the rectors of each institution to be distributed by them among the most needy members of their faculties.

During the last five months, gifts amounting to more than $6000 have been received, mostly from members of the faculty of the University of Chicago and the Harvard Medical Schools. The first shipments of 15 to 30 CARE packages each have already been acknowledged by a dozen German and Austrian universities.

But this is no more than a beginning. The food situation is still deteriorating and will deteriorate further within the next months. If the work is to be at all successful, the shipments must be continued on a much larger scale.

Truman Faces Labor Bill

By Mark Sullivan

Cooperation Question

PUBLIC INTEREST in whether President Truman vetoes the labor bill includes interest in the considerations that bear upon him as he arrives at a decision. Granting that Mr. Truman is conscientious, that he has a mind of his own and arrives ultimately at his own decisions, it remains inevitable that he must to some extent depend upon others.

This is true of any measure coming before any President, and especially true of the labor bill containing some 20,000 words and including many intricate provisions, expressed with minute care and definition. During the some two weeks in which the labor bill was being put in final form by conferees of the House and Senate, many other problems of extreme public importance weighed upon the President, and he was obliged by official engagement and his mother's illness to spend many days away from Washington. Under modern conditions no President can be expected to give meticulous word by word study to every word of every legislative measure or other document that goes before him. As a substitute there is in the executive department a system which lays before the President accurate and adequate digests of measures and accompanying data.

CONSIDERING the handicap under which any President as an individual necessarily is, there is some weight in the fact that the committees and groups in Congress who draft measures and who propose and argue for amendments, have given the subjects a minuteness of care impossible for the Executive to achieve. The pending labor bill was written with meticulous word by word care by the Labor Committees of the House and Senate. Within the Senate Committee there was prolonged face-to-face argument, conducted in a spirit of mutual respect, by Senators holding such opposed views on some provisions as Mr. Ball of Minnesota and Mr. Ives of New York. Again, in the conference of committees of the House and Senate, to adjust differences between the versions originally passed by the two, there was prolonged concentration upon provisions to be put in the bill. The care and discussion that went into the writing of the labor bill is itself a consideration that should weigh upon the President's decision on it.

In yet another respect the labor bill deserves a special consideration from the President. To a degree not often equaled this bill represents the will of the legislative branch of government. As it lies on the President's desk it was passed by the House with a majority of more than 4 to 1, literally 320 to 79. In the Senate the majority was more than 3 to 1, literally 54 to 17. And in both House and Senate a majority of the President's own party supported the bill. In the House 103 Democrats voted for it, only 66 against. In the Senate 17 Democrats supported the bill, 15 opposed.

FROM HIS OFFICIAL family, the President receives information and advice. From other sources he receives pleas and pressures. Among these the most strenuous come from the labor leaders. These are hardly in a position to receive the consideration they demand. Throughout the weeks in which the labor legislation was being written, the labor leaders maintained a single position: no legislation at all. To Congress they offered no alternative, and they now offer none to the President. The tens of thousands of letters and telegrams which labor leaders have incited to be sent to the White House each and all come down to four words, "veto the labor bill."

Veto of the labor bill by President Truman would be an extreme use of the veto power, an extreme assertion of the constitutional power of the executive to frustrate the legislative branch. Not only has the legislative branch expressed itself by a more than 4 to 1 vote in the House and a more than 3 to 1 vote in the Senate for the bill as it now lies before the President. Further that that, Congress has already paid deference and consideration to the President. In the final form of the bill arrived at by conference committees of the House and Senate, provisions were dropped which Congress wanted and which had been written into the original versions passed by the Senate and House. They were dropped for the deliberate purpose of making the bill more acceptable to the President. That reflected a spirit of cooperation on the part of Congress. Veto now by the President would fairly be regarded by Congress as a refusal of cooperation.

National Theater

I was very happy to see a letter like the one Fred W. Davis wrote in The Post of June 3, not because I agree with him, but because if he and a few more like him will not renew their Theater Guild subscription, there will be a chance for me and a few more like me to get them. I am sure that the Guild has a waiting list for such cancellations. If the National Theater does change its present policy, then I for one will not subscribe.

Hoover Dam

A Communication

MR. ICKES (communication published May 19) attacked your fine editorial of May 4 commending the restoration of the name of Hoover Dam. His letter concedes that "no one could properly dispute the legal power of the Congress to change the name of Boulder Dam. . . " But when, in 1933, Secretary Ickes changed the name of Hoover Dam, he apparently felt otherwise, because there were at that time five acts of Congress on the books so designating it. See the statement of Chairman-elect Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee, December 12, 1930 (Congressional Record, Vol. 74, p. 646):

"So that the dam is now officially named by both the Secretary of the Interior and by Congress."

The last four of these acts were enacted when the Democrats controlled Congress. All five are recited on the face of the act of April 30, 1947, restoring the name to that used in those statutes.

Mr. Ickes' defense is that a bill by Senator Smoot, introduced prior to enactment of these five laws, did not pass. The fact is that Secretary Wilbur on January 13, 1930, reported to the committee: " . . . I believe that action on the bill might well be deferred until construction has commenced, or at least until an appropriation has been provided by Congress."

Accordingly, the bill was never brought up for hearings in committee, being overtaken and superseded by the act of February 14, 1931, the first appropriation act to name Hoover Dam.

ATTORNEY GENERAL Cummings reminded Mr. Ickes of these statutes on January 21, 1935, when, in reply to Mr. Ickes' protest against the use of the name Hoover Dam in the pleadings in United States versus Arizona (295 U. S. 174), he wrote:

"The difficulty in this particlar instance seems to grow out of the fact that, while the term Boulder Dam' is used as often as possible and scattered somewhat promiscuously in strategic places in the bill of complaint, nevertheless the drafters of that document seemed to feel it necessary in describing the dam to use the title employed by the Congress in the acts appropriating money for its construction. I believe these acts refer to the dam as 'Hoover Dam' "

Mr. Ickes' letter says that Commissioner of Reclamation Elwood Mead reported "that there was great confusion as to the name of the dam," and asked him "to determine which name should be official." It does not profit Mr. Ickes to cast the responsibility on Dr. Mead. Actually, Commissioner Mead, on January 10, 1930, had advised Secretary Wilbur: "President Hoover's influence in shaping the Boulder Dam project makes it fitting that the dam should have his name, and the public would approve the change."

In April, 1933, Commissioner Mead sent Secretary Ickes a pamphlet describing the dam for the Century of Progress Exposition, calling it Hoover Dam. Mr. Ickes sent it back with a note May 8, 1933, saying: "I would be glad if you will refer to the dam as 'Boulder Dam' in this pamphlet, as well as in correspondence and other references to the dam you may have occasion to make in the future."

SIGNING THIS memorandum was apparently all that Mr. Ickes did about the name. Although his letter to The Post says: "I decided upon 'Boulder'," and "I gave orders with reference to the name," on May 17, 1935, he wrote Congressman Treadway: "There was no executive or administrative order issued. Therefore, I cannot supply you with one."

Mr. Ickes says that the Colorado River Compact was a "mere futile and as yet unaccomplished attempt to peddle waters as between claimant States . . . "

This compact did not "peddle" waters.

On December 15, 1922, Delph E. Carpenter, Colorado's commissioner, reported to the Colorado Legislature: "It (the Colorado River Compact) protects our development from adverse claims on account of any great reservoir or other construction on the lower river. It removes all excuses for embargoes upon our future development and leaves us free to develop our territory in the manner and at the times our necessities may require.

The compact thus made it possible to build Hoover Dam, in the lower basin, without foreclosing the upper basion's right to put water to use decades later.

THE COMPACT designedly left to the States of each basin the internal allocation of that basin's share. The Boulder Canyon Project Act directed the Secretary of the Interior to formulate a "comprehensive scheme" of river development, as the basis for these local subcompacts. Mr. Ickes was Secretary of the Interior for over 12 years.

In December, 1946, the State of Colorado, formally commenting on the plan prepared under Mr. Ickes' administration (released under Mr. Krug's), said:

"It (the Interior Department plan) ignores the allocations of water made by the Colorado River Compact, the provisions of the Boulder Canyon Project Act and the California Self-Limitation Act, and contemplates increased uses of water by existing projects and additional uses of water by projects yet to be constructed, contrary to the provisions of the compact and the above mentioned statutes . . . "

These two official comments from Colorado, coupled with Mr. Ickes' notion that the compact was supposed to "peddle waters as between claimant States," tell their own story.

AS TO Mr. Ickes' general discontent, the House Committee report (No. 87, Eightieth Congress) on the Hoover Dam resolution, March 4, 1947, answers him:

"Herbert Hoover, while Secretary of Commerce, in 1922 presided as the representative of the Federal Government over two score meetings of the Representatives of Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming, for the formulation of the Colorado River compact. He had a major part in bringing the States into agreement.

"This compact, signed November 24, 1922, made construction of the dam possible by allocating the waters of the river system, between the upper and lower Colorado River basins, settling a 25-year-old controversy. The Boulder Canyon Project Act, enacted December 21, 1928, when Mr. Hoover was President-elect, ratified the compact and authorized construction of a dam in Black Canyon or Boulder Canyon, leaving to the Secretary of the Interior the choice of sites. It also laid upon him and the Secretary of the Interior extraordinary responsibilities.

"As President, Herbert Hoover took an active part in settling the engineering problems and location of the dam in Black Canyon; was required by the project act to obtain power and water contracts adequate to assure some 200 million dollars of revenues before construction was begun; settled the difficult and controversial questions involved in the allocation of the power, and made the revenue contracts which Congress required; and proclaimed the Boulder Canyon Project Act to be in effect on June 25, 1929.

"This act ratified the Colorado River Compact, which Mr. Hoover had signed seven years before, and subjected all operations of the Boulder Canyon project to that compact. He subsequently reported to Congress, through Secretary Wilbur, compliance with its mandate that this project be built on a self-liquidating basis; Congress made the necessary appropriations (in acts which five times named the dam in his honor); the construction contracts were signed under his administration, and when he left office construction had been pushed to a point where it was more than a year ahead of schedule."

Let the record say whether Mr. Ickes, on the one hand, or the American Congress and President Truman on the other, have been right in their appraisal of Mr. Hoover's services.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Politics And World Responsibility

"POLITICAL passion and prejudice should have no part. With foresight and a willingness on the part of our people to face up to the vast responsibility which history has clearly placed upon our country, the difficulties I have outlined can and will be overcome."

Childs

These were the concluding words of the historic speech Secretary of State George C. Marshall made at Harvard University. The date of June 5 is likely to be triple-starred in the history books because of that speech even though the American people fall short of the willingness and the foresight the crisis calls for.

Even the casual newspaper reader cannot have missed the meaning of the coincidence of events on that day. Almost at the same hour that Marshall spoke, President Truman issued his attack on Senator Robert A. Taft .

Taft had said that the Truman program of foreign aid was keeping up prices here at home, contrary to the expressed intention of the President to bring prices down. You could read into the Taft statement an implication that the President was guilty of deliberate double-dealing.

The Taft statement was politics. It was provocatively aimed at a sensitive point of national policy. Mr. Truman can hardly be blamed for being upset.

BUT WHETHER he intended it or not, the President's statement together with Taft's will be taken by many as the opening round in next year's political contest. Certainly it foreshadows the kind of arguments we shall hear in 1948. Those arguments will grow increasingly bitter in the next 16 months.

The Taft-Truman exchange illuminates the dilemma of the coming months in a startling way. In the simplest terms, it is this: National and international policy are so linked together that it is difficult or impossible to have a bipartisan foreign policy and a partisan domestic policy.

As Mr. Truman acknowledged in his blast, the foreign-aid program does mean pressure on prices in this country. That is part of the grumble of businessmen who level the charge of politics at the President for his effort to talk prices down.

What Mr. Truman might have pointed out was that Senator Taft gets most of the credit or the blame—depending on the political slant you take—for destroying price controls. It is true that the controls had been gravely weakened by action of the Truman Administration before Congress a year ago scuttled price control. Without any controls, however, the tremendous pressures at home and abroad sent prices skyward.

State Department planners are working on the outline of a program for support of a unified Europe which would cost upward of six billion a year for five or six years. In his clear, precise language, Marshall told us why such a program is essential. It is essential both to European stability and American prosperity in light of the fact that roughly one sixth of what the United States makes or grows is being sent abroad. Cut even a part of those exports and the effect would be felt immediately.

In order to send five or six billions of our goods to Europe in some form of lend-lease, we should need a minimum of regulation and control in force here. Otherwise we would risk feeding the inflation at home.

Yet anyone who looks candidly at the present political scene must realize that the trend is in exactly the opposite direction. Some export controls have been taken off. The pressure is to throw them all overboard.

LINCOLN SAID the Nation could not exist half slave and half free. It is hard to see how the Nation can accept the responsibility of its overwhelming economic power with an untrammeled boom at home and the controlled expenditure of billions abroad. Boom at home and directed spending for peace abroad do not go together.

There is no reason to believe that those on the Republican side who will make most of the background noise in Washington leading up to '48 have faced this reality. Taft's statement was an obvious effort to exploit current prejudice.

One man could do a great deal to make us understand that domestic and foreign policies are tied together. That man is Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York. A responsible speech on foreign policy by Dewey, recognizing the fearful realities of the moment, would clear the murky air of Washington like a thundershower. It is an opportunity such as few men are given.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Discomfort Or Disaster?

BEFORE VERY LONG, the salvation of Europe will be the dominant issue in American politics. A vast and costly program to halt further westward extensions of the Soviet sphere, by restoring Europe's economic and political health, is now in preparation at the State Department. Since time is growing short, this program will almost certainly be offered at a special session of Congress.

As one of the highest officials and ablest men in the Government rather bleakly remarked, "We can choose between the discomfort of a special session and the total disaster of a European collapse." These are open secrets, now almost publicly admitted since Secretary Marshall's eloquently simple speech at Harvard and President Truman's White House statement. There is no longer any question whether the Administration will permit disaster to occur by default. The question now is whether the Administration's program for averting disaster will be approved by the Congress and the country.

At the moment, the outlook appears dark, since the country has not been warned of what impends abroad, while most members of Congress seem to be dreamily convinced that this is 1920 instead of 1947. Yet there are certain hidden factors in the situation decidedly conducive to optimism.

FIRST, the gradual impairment of the machinery of bipartisan foreign policy (without which nothing can be done) has at last been firmly stopped by Secretary Marshall. The weakening of this vital machinery during the last months emphatically did not result from such trivial causes as hurt feelings and irritated vanities. On the contrary, it resulted from temporary violation of the root-principle of any truly bipartisan policy—that shared responsibility for policy decisions is only the end product of continuous communication of information and consultation as to programs in the period when the policy decisions are being taken. The recent almost total absence of communication and consultation between the Administration and congressional leaders is now a thing of the past, by Secretary Marshall's wise initiative.

Last week, in fact, Secretary Marshall invited the Republican leader for foreign affairs, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, to spend a long afternoon with him at Blair House. He had perhaps deferred doing so until he had all the facts in hand. At any rate, he now laid all the facts upon the table, without seeking to conceal their grave implications. A long and extremely frank discussion ensued.

Vandenberg gave no commitments, either as to a reconstruction program in general, or as to the special session matter in particular. But the atmosphere of bipartisan cooperation was fully restored, as Vandenberg was himself careful to mark by going out of his way to offer glowing praise to Secretary Marshall the other day on the Senate floor. And with this atmosphere once again present, the stage is set for the subsequent consultations, not only with Vandenberg but with other leaders of the Senate and House, at which great issues of national interest—indeed, of national survival—must be discussed without regard to petty politics. This in itself is a deeply hopeful development, although the rapid conversion of the Congress from its present mood most certainly cannot be looked for.

Another hopeful sign is the manner in which the Administration program is being prepared. For 150 years, the foreign relations of the United States have consisted of a series of local, generally temporary and often unrelated expedients. The State Department was so devoid of machinery for fitting all its facts together into one broad picture that the rapid onset of a world economic and monetary crisis was only realized three months or so ago. It happened half by accident, when a junior official insisted that the economic staffs prepare consolidated balance sheets of Europe's and the world's irreducible needs for American products and ability to pay for these requirements in dollars. The balance sheets, reluctantly put together, caused downright consternation.

SECRETARY MARSHALL has moved to prevent recurrences of this sort of mishap by establishing the departmental planning section, under George Kennan. It is in this section that all the data from the economists and political officers will be fitted into an over-all program. The process is going on now. Furthermore, the program is not being prepared without reference to ability of the United States to foot the bill, which will inevitably run into many billions of dollars. Instead, an American balance sheet is also in preparation, and the program will be fitted into it.

In addition, invaluable experience has been brought to the task of preparing both balance sheet and program by Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett. Long an expert in monetary problems, he is understood to have foreseen the coming crisis while still a private individual, and to have prepared on his own hook a study of what might be done. His good judgment may be gauged both from the reported conclusion of this study, that the immediate need was for about five billion dollars a year, or very near the official figure, as well as from his known, realistic opposition to extending aid abroad in the form of irrepayable, trouble-causing loans rather than straight, honest grants.

Finally, this careful work of preparations is already well advanced, as must be obvious from the frankness with which Secretary Marshall and President Truman have spoken. Indeed, one of the problems now really troubling is how to set their programs in motion. For the reconstruction of Europe implies a European, as well as an American program. And the question being bruited is whether we ask the European nations to prepare such a program, or offer our aid on the condition that a program is prepared. European initiative is hoped for, and there are some indications that the British have already been gently prodded so that European initiative will be forthcoming.

I. G. Farben Cartel Again Gets Help in U. S., Kilgore Charges

By The Associated Press

Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.) declared last night that some persons who "endangerred" the Nation's safety by prewar participation in the German I. G. Farben cartel "have not learned a lesson but are working even now to rebuild this dangerous structure."

Kilgore said war crimes indictments against 24 I. G. Farben officials in Germany constitute a "moral indictment against some American industrialists who gambled for high profits at the risk of endangering our entire economic mobilization just prior to World War II." He did not name them.

Calling I. G. Farben "the world cartel which the Nazi leaders used so successfully in waging economic warfare," Kilgore said it was brought out in the indictments against its officials that there were prewar arrangements which "retarded the production within the United States of certain strategic products, including synthetic rubber, magnesium, synthetic nitrogen, tetrezene, atabrine and sulpha drugs.

"This delay," Kilgore said, "cost our Government untold millions of dollars that must be repaid by the American taxpayer. But the really tragic aspect of this cartel is the fact that it contributed to the loss of many American lives that cannot be restored. . . .

"It is too late now to repair the tremendous damage caused by the Farben cartel. But it is not too late to call before the bar of public opinion those American industrialists who participated in the Farben cartel. This is the least we can do for the brave young men who sacrificed so much during the late war."

Meanwhile, Senator Brewster (R., Me.) expressed "deep concern" over the possibility that GIs in Germany may absorb the Nazi philosophy.

He indorsed a report by a former colonel, Julius Klein of Chicago, which contends that American occupation troops are exposed to carefully planned and subtle German propaganda.

In a statement, Brewster said the Klein report found that "within the coming 10 years of occupation, at least one million of our politically inexperienced soldiers may become exposed to the very virus of naziism for the destruction of which the country fought a costly war."

Gallaudet Alumni Meet Today

Alumni of Gallaudet College will begin a four-day reunion, their twentieth annual meeting, today at the Kendall Green campus.

Dr. Cadwallader Washburn of Brunswick, Me., will address the closing banquet Thursday night. A leading etcher and entymologist whose works hang in major art galleries, his two books on entymology are used as school texts.

Scheduled for consideration at the business sessions are an appraisal of the policies of the new college administration which took effect in 1945, the disposition of the Gallaudet memorial building fund of nearly $90,000 for erection of a memorial to the college's founder, Dr. Edward Miner Gallaudet, and the reading of the survey report of the college prepared by Dr. Harry Best of the University of Kentucky, for the FSA.

The program opens this morning with addresses of welcome by Dr. Percival Hall, former college president now heading the board of directors, and Dr. Leonard M. Elmstead, college president; Harry N. Rosenfield, assistant to the administrator of the Federal Security Agent, will speak on "The Purpose of the Survey of Gallaudet."

There is danger ahead...danger to you and to all other Americans who work for a living. You must stop and take notice or get hurt.

Congress has now passed and sent to the President the most dangerous bill of our times. It is called the Taft-Hartley Bill.

There have been other bills pressured through the Congress and laid on the desk of our Chief Executive —but never one with more one-sided intent—never before one designed to weigh down the scales of justice on the side of privilege and power—never before a bill written to punish millions of working people simply because they are union working people.

The Slave Labor bill is a travesty and a mockery of our American heritage. It is a threat to a free people.

WHAT CAN YOU DO ABOUT IT?

Reprinted by Permission of The Evening Star

We Yield . . . to the Crystal Gazers!

Years ago we resolved to let others do the predicting—while we confined our effort in directing the policy of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, in keeping with the authority vested in the Brotherhood's chief executive officers, by action of the lawfully elected delegates in international convention assembled.

This arrangement has worked out so well that we propose to stay with it and let the crystal-gazers do the predicting. In that spirit we submit for consideration the following facts.

After carefully studying the CASE Bill last June, the President of the United States returned it to the Congress unsigned. He accompanied it with a message in which he said, "I would not be properly discharging the duties of my office if I were to approve of H. R. 4908."

In this message the President pointed out certain structural defects in the Bill and in constructive fashion the President requested a comprehensive legislative program designed to remove some of the causes of the insecurity felt by many workers and employers—to deal with the underlying causes of industrial strife and unrest.

Believe it or not, the Taft-Hartley Bill contains the very same provisions which the President found objectionable in the CASE Bill. It also contains objectionable provisions which were not in the CASE Bill—some are political—some trouble making—some reactionary and some are very dangerous.

In framing the Taft-Hartley Bill the Committee paid not the slightest attention to the President's recommendations.

We quote from Public Document No. 651—"Message from the President of the United States—The White House, June 11, 1946," page 5. Referring to Section 4 of the CASE Bill the President said, "Section 4: This creates a new five-man Federal Mediation Board. All mediation and conciliation functions of the Secretary of Labor and the United States Conciliation Service are transferred to the Board. The Board, although technically within the Department of Labor, would not be under the control of the Secretary of Labor.

"I consider the establishment of this new agency to be inconsistent with the principles of good administration. As I have previously stated, it is my opinion that Government today demands reorganization along the lines which the Congress has set forth in the Reorganization Act of 1945, i.e., the organization of Government activity into the fewest number of Government agencies consistent with efficiency. Control of purely administrative matters should be grouped as much as possible under members of the Cabinet, who are in turn responsible to the President.

"The proposed Federal Mediation Board would have no quasi-judicial or quasi-legislative functions. It would be purely an administrative agency. Surely, functions of this kind should be concentrated in the Department of Labor. . . .

"The bill proposes to transfer that Service and its functions to the newly formed Federal Mediation Board. To me this is the equivalent of creating a separate and duplicate Department of Labor, depriving the Secretary of Labor of many of his principal responsibilities and placing the conciliation and mediation functions in an independent body.

"In the eyes of Congress and of the public the President and the Secretary of Labor would remain responsible for the exercise of mediation and conciliation functions in labor disputes, while, in fact, those functions would be conducted by another body not fully responsible to either.

"As far back as September 6, 1945, I said in a message to Congress: 'Meanwhile, plans for strengthening the Department of Labor, and bringing under it functions belonging to it, are going forward.' The establishment of the proposed Federal Mediation Board is a backward step."

(Section 201-205 The Taft-Hartley Bill is substantially the same.)

Page 7. Referring to Section 9 of the CASE Bill, the President said, "Section 9: This provision deprives supervisory employees of their status as employees for the purposes of the National Labor Relations Act.

"This section would strip from supervisory employees the rights of self-organization and collective bargaining now guaranteed them under the National Labor Relations Act. I fear that this section would increase labor strife, since I have no doubt that supervisory employees would resort to self-help to gain the rights now given to them by law.

"This complex question has long been under consideration by the National Labor Relations Board. The board and the courts have pointed out that supervisory employees have a dual capacity. In dealing with the employees under them, they act for management. However, with respect to their own wages, hours of work, and other terms and conditions of employment, they act for themselves. The full right of supervisory employees to the benefits of collective bargaining is one that cannot be lightly thrown aside.

"On the other hand, management is entitled to proper protection. Somewhere in the area of disagreement between the parties the line can be drawn with reasonable accuracy. There has been no attempt to draw that line in this section."

(Sections 2 (11) and 14, the Taft-Hartley Bill are substantially the same.)

Page 8. In concluding, the President said, "The passage of H.R. 4908 confirms the need for a careful study of labor-management problems, with a view toward long-range remedies. It demonstrates the dangers of attempting to draft permanent labor legislation without painstaking and exhaustive consideration.

"H.R. 4908 strikes at symptoms and ignores underlying causes. . . .

"It must be remembered that industrial strife is a symptom of basic economic maladjustments. We cannot attribute work stoppages to any one factor. As we move from war to peace, severe strains are placed upon our economic system. Labor and management alike are seeking security. The combination of rising prices, scarcity of commodities, lowered standards of living, and altered tax programs today creates fears which are present at the conference table to disturb the orderly process of collective bargaining.

"A solution of labor-management difficulties therefore is to be found not alone in well-considered legislation dealing directly with industrial relations, but also in a comprehensive legislative program designed to remove some of the causes of the insecurity felt by many workers and employers.

"During the past 10 months I have urged the Congress to enact such a program. Among the proposals which I have recommended are adequate insurance against unemployment, health, and medical services for families of low and moderate income at costs they can afford, a fair minimum wage, and the continuance of the price-control and stabilization laws in effective form. These measures would remove some of the major causes of insecurity and would greatly aid in achieving industrial peace.

"Our problem in shaping permanent legislation in this field is to probe for the causes of lock-outs, strikes, and industrial disturbances. Then, to the extent possible, we must eliminate these causes. Strikes against private employers cannot be ended by legislative decree. Men cannot be forced in a peacetime democracy to work for a private employer under compulsion. Therefore, strikes must be considered in the whole context of our modern industrial society. They must be considered in the light of inflationary pressures, of problems of full employment, of economic security.

"Legislation governing industrial relations is workable only when carefully considered against this broad background. I am confident that with painstaking and dispassionate study which will probe fairly and deeply, Congress can evolve equitable legislation which promises an era of peaceful industrial relations.

"We accomplish nothing by striking at labor here and at management there. Affirmative policy is called for, and a congressional committee such as I have suggested is the best means of formulating it.

"There should be no emphasis placed upon considerations of whether a bill is anti-labor or, prolabor. Where excesses have developed on the part of labor leaders or management, such excesses should be corrected—not in order to injure either party but to bring about as great an equality as possible between the bargaining positions of labor and management. Neither should be permitted to become too powerful as against the public interest as a whole.

"Equality for both and vigilance for the public welfare—these should be the watchwords of future legislation.

"The bill which I am returning to you does not meet these standards. . . .

"It is always with reluctance that I return a bill to the Congress without my approval. I feel, however, that I would not be properly discharging the duties of my office if I were to approve H.R. 4908."

(The Taft-Hartley Bill, like the Case Bill, is not the answer.)

"IT IS NOT LABOR, BUT THE OPPONENTS OF LABOR, WHOSE GREED IS ENDANGERING OUR PROSPERITY AND THREATENING A DEPRESSION. IT IS NOT LABOR, BUT THE OPPONENTS OF LABOR, WHO HAVE TOO MUCH POWER. WHO ARE THESE OVERLY POWERFUL PEOPLE OF WHOM I SPEAK? LOOK TO THE ORGANIZATIONS BACKING THIS BILL, AND THERE YOU WILL FIND THEM" . . . "THIS BILL IS NOT IN THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE WHOLE AMERICAN PEOPLE."

—Senator Robert F. Wagner, Congressional Record, May 12, 1947.

Auto Workers Ratify Kaiser-Frazer Contract

Detroit, June 8 (AP).—A new two-year contract with Kaiser-Frazer Corp. in line with the steel-auto industry wage pattern was approved today by the CIO United Auto Workers.

The union membership ratification came as the Briggs Manufactyring Co. appeal directly to leading UAW-CIO officers to "interest themselves" in a threatened strike at eight Briggs plants Wednesday.

Kaiser-Frazer said its new agreement covering 10,000 employes provides a 11½-cent hourly wage boost and six paid holidays, with a provision for reopening wages after May 1, 1948.

It also continues an employe "trust fund" under which the company pools $5 for each automobile shipped and distributes the money to eligible workers just before Christmas. The company said the fund probably would exceed one million dollars by November 23, the date set for accounting of the pool.

A strike by 20,000 Briggs employes would have an almost immediate effect on car production at the Chrysler Corp. and the Packard Motor Car Co., for which six of the company's plants in Detroit and one in Evansville, Ind., manufacture auto bodies.

In a letter to the union officials Vice President Walter O. Briggs, jr., cited what he termed "the seriousness of the situation" and the possible "far reaching effects." He addressed it to UAW-CIO President Walter P. Reuther, Vice Presidents R. J. Thomas and Richard T. Leonard and Secretary-Treasurer George F. Addes.

Contract negotiations between company and union, under way since May 1, were broken off Saturday.

7000 Ask Strike Vote

Detroit, June 8 (AP).—Approximately 7000 Ford Motor Co. production employes called today for a strike vote, after their UAW-CIO negotiators complained of inability to reach agreement with management on contract demands.

A rank and file meeting indorsed recommendations by UAW Vice President Richard Leonard and Ford Local 600 President Thomas Thompson that machinery for a strike poll be set up immediately. Balloting is to follow within 10 days.

Pepper Plans Bill to Raise Minimum Pay

By The Associated Press

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) announced yesterday he and 10 other Senators will introduce legislation today to raise the minimum legal wage of workers in interstate commerce from 40 cents an hour to 65 cents immediately, to 70 cents at the end of one year and to 75 cents a year later.

Pepper said in a statement the proposed bill "carries out the suggestion of President Truman that the minimum wage under the Fair Labor Standards Act be raised to 'at least 65 cents an hour' when he signed the portal to portal pay bill on May 14."

Coauthors will include Senators Wagner (D., N. Y.), Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), Murray (D., Mont.), Chavez (D., N. Mex.), Green (D., R. I.), Magnuson (D., Wash.), Myers (D., Pa.), Taylor (D., Idaho), Langer (R., N. Dak.), and Morse (R., Oreg.)

Last Friday four other Senator—Aiken (R., Vt.), Tobey (R., N. H.), Ives (R., N. Y.), and Cooper (R., Ky.)—introduced a bill that would raise the minimum wage from 40 to 65 cents an hour permanently.

"In our opinion," Pepper said, "the ultimate minimum wage of 75 cents under our bill would bring economically defenseless workers who are grossly underpaid a step closer to a decent American standard of living.

South Leads, 2-1 In Antiunionism

By the United Press

Government figures last night showed that antiunion sentiment of Southern workers is twice as great as among Northern and Western wage-earners.

The National Labor Relations Board reported that workers in 24 per cent of elections conducted in April voted against joining a union. The number of votes against a union was 20 per cent of the total cast.

A breakdown by States showed that in 11 Southern States the antiunion vote was 30.4 per cent of the total cast. The antiunion vote was 17.5 per cent of total ballots in the eight biggest industrial States north of the Ohio River and three Pacific Coast States. It was 17.1 per cent in the remaining 26 Eastern, border and Western States.

The Southern States, where the CIO and AFL are in the second year of intensive organizing campaigns, had 19 per cent of the 540 elections in April, according to NLRB. The AFL won 42 polls to 28 for the CIO. The CIO Southern Organizing Committee claimed 422 victorious NLRB elections since its drive started last summer through May.

Montgomery Plans Tennis Courts in '48

Construction of seven new community centers and 28 tennis courts for Montgomery County, Md., is planned in 1948.

Park Commissioner E. Brooke Lee said the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission has not attempted to estimate the cost of the projects because of the unsettled state of the construction industry.

A bond issue already has been authorized to finance the building program. The county may use 2 cents of the 5 cent recreation tax to retire a bond issue for permanent recreation facilities.

Tentative plans provide for community recreation buildings similar to those at Hillandale and Pinecrest to be built at Woodacres, Brookmont, Little Falls Branch Park, North Four Corners, Capitol View-East Kensington, Long Branch Valley and Kensington View-University View areas.

First tennis courts are to be built at Woodacres, Brookmont, Little Falls Valley Park, Silver Spring, Long Branch Valley, Hillandale, Pinecrest, North Four Corners, Capitol View-East Kensington and Kensington View-University View areas. The exact number of courts to be constructed in each area has not been determined, Lee said.

The commission also plans to grade and seed 17 new playfields not in main parks, and prepare 8 or 10 additional playfields in the main parks. Fund surpluses not expended because of the war will finance this work, he said.

Plans recently were announced for opening the old Argyle Park Country Club 9-hole golf course as a public course and for tennis courts and other recreational features in this area.

Beall to Address Elks on Flag Day At Silver Spring

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) will address the Flag Day exercises of the Silver Spring Elks Club, Saturday, at the National Guard Armory, Silver Spring.

Other speakers will include Brig. Gen. E. H. Alexander of the Army Air Forces and Admiral Adolphus Staton.

A parade will be formed at 1:30 p. m. at the B. & O. Railroad station, with Jesse West as marshal. The parade will be led by the Elks Boys Band, accompanied by the Montgomery Blair High School majorettes.

Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, members of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department, veterans' organizations, several units of the Army and Navy and members of the Elks Lodge will participate.

The parade will proceed north on Georgia ave. to Colesville pike, right to Fenton st., and along Fenton st. to the Armory.

Civic Federation to Elect New Officers at Bethesda

Election of officers will mark the final meeting of the Montgomery County Civic Federation at 8 tonight in the Bethesda Elementary School.

A report on the county budget will be presented by Lewis Sims, chairman of the public finance and budget committee.

The county budget will be the subject for a public hearing tomorrow at Rockville and the meeting of the federation tonight is expected to instruct its officers on the stand to be taken in regard to increasing teachers' salaries and the other portions of the budget.

Rhees Burket has been nominated to succeed himself as president of the federation. Others nominated are: Herbert Eaton, vice president; Ernest Woodchek, recording secretary; Mrs. W. W. Rubey, corresponding secretary; Mansfield Lonie for treasurer, and Ralph D. Boyd, Dr. Lewis Meriam, Robert Hanson and Mrs. Mary S. Cookson, members of the executive committee.

Plans for the annual banquet to be held June 19 at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church will be discussed at the meeting. The meeting tonight will select the recipient of the annual award of the Oliver Owen Kuhn Trophy for outstanding civic achievement which will be presented at the banquet.

Students to Cruise

The Student Veterans Club of George Washington University will hold its second moonlight cruise tonight at 8:30 aboard the S.S. Potomac. Invitations have been extended to students of Georgetown, Maryland and American universities, and the graduating seniors of Tech, Roosevelt, Eastern and Coolidge high schools.

Sen. Johnston Ready for Rail Bill Filibuster

By The Associated Press

Senator Olin Johnston (D., S. C.) declared yesterday, "I am willing to talk until I fall" to block Senate approval of the revived Bulwinkle railroad bill.

The controversial legislation comes up for Senate debate today. It would exempt railroads and other common carriers from prosecution under the antitrust laws for making agreements on rates, settlement of claims, safety standards and related matters, when the agreements bear the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A similar measure last session by Representative Bulwinkle (D., N. C.) cleared the House by a 5-to-1 margin but was crowded out of Senate consideration in the closing days. Senator Reed (R., Kans.) reintroduced it this year and the bill, somewhat amended, has been awaiting Senate action since March 3. The House has not acted on it this session.

The measure is actively opposed by Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) and a group of other Senators, many from the South. They argue that its enactment would be the entering wedge for complete destruction of the antitrust laws.

Truman Seen Signing Rent Control Bill

By The Associated Press

Two Senators working on the final draft of a new rent control bill permitting a 15 per cent increase in some cases predicted yesterday that President Truman will sign it.

Senators McCarthy (R., Wis.) and Sparkman (D., Ala.), who made the forecast, told a reporter they expect the Senate-House conference committee of which they are members to complete the bill by Wednesday. The final version then must be approved by the Senate and House before going to the President.

Both chambers voted originally forthe provision permitting landlords to raise rents up to 15 per cent in return for a lease running through 1948 where the tenant agrees. McCarthy reported there have been no differences over this section in the conference committee except on its wording.

McCarthy said that "I don't think there is any danger of a veto and that if Mr. Truman should decline to sign the bill "there will be no rent control at all." The present law expires June 30.

McCarthy said the bill was generally agreed to by both Republicans and Democrats and the changes made in conference "are pretty minor in nature."

The length of the extension, McCarthy said, is the principal problem still to be worked out in the conference.

The Senate voted on extension through next February 29. The House bill provides an extension through December 31 and gives the President authority to continue controls through March 31 if he finds the need exists. Mr. Truman had asked that the present law be continued through next June 30 without change.

Minister, Wife Fight Off Rape-Bent Intruder

New York, June 8 (AP).—A 69-year-old Brooklyn Presbyterian minister and his wife today beat off a Negro intruder who, police said, attempted to rape the minister's wife. The clergyman, who followed the intruder to the street, held the Negro at bay with a golf club until a police radio car arrived.

The minister, the Rev. Alwin E. Magary, and his wife, Marion, 40, told police the Negro attempted to shoot them but his gun did not fire.

Thunderstorms Hit District For 3d Consecutive Day

Run, and other roads in Alexandria and Arlington were covered shortly after the storm by 3 to 5 feet of water. Highway No. 1 was flooded several times yesterday as the water rose again at intervals.

The weather observer at National Airport described yesterday's two thunderstorms as only "moderate." The first lasted 20 minutes and the second 70 minutes.

The forecaster expected relief today from storms, seeing no rain in sight. Temperatures, however, will continue warm, he said.

During Saturday night's storm, the Weather Bureau recorded 3.42 inches of rain. The record three-hour rainfall here is 4.14 inches, which fell September 2, 1922.

A 22-foot cabin cruiser, the S. S. Reichmont, owned by the Sea Scouts, was found adrift in the Potomac about 10:30 a. m. yesterday, apparently broken loose from its moorings by Saturday night's storm.

American Automobile Association here received more than 500 distress calls from flood-besieged motorists as a result of Saturday's storm, and some calls continued to come in yesterday afternoon.

Lightning struck a high tension line at Georgia ave. and Colesville pike, Silver Spring, Md., shortly after 6 p. m. yesterday, temporarily extinguishing lights in that area. Potomac Electric Power Co. linemen quickly repaired the damage.

A chimney on a house at 9919 Old Blandensburg rd., Silver Spring, was also struck

31 Jap Soldiers Face Trial On Charges of Cannibalism

By Spencer Davis

Manila, June 8 (AP).—A grisly story of man-eating Japanese soldiers, who stalked Filipinos on cannibalistic forays and sometimes ate one another, came out of the jungles of northern Mindanao today.

Thirty-one of the Japanese, who surrendered last February, are held at Del Monte, northern Mindanao, facing more than 20 murder counts in which cannibalism is involved.

S. Melville Hussey, Bayonne, N. J., of the Army's legal section in Manila, who obtained confessions, styled the story a chronicle "of cumulative horror with few parallels of surpassing brutality."

Hussey said the case first took form in the story of a Filipino who was forced by the Japanese to taste the flesh of his own parents.

The Filipino, Felix Saguinwan, 24, identified three of the 31 Japanese soldiers as the ones who broke into his home while he, his father, mother, two sisters, younger brother and sister-in-law were eating their noon meal in November, 1945.

The Japanese bayoneted the father, mother, sister and brother before the horrified eyes of the others and cut flesh from the bodies.

"They cooked the flesh before us," he related. "After eating all they wanted, they placed the human meat on a plate and ordered us to eat. We refused, sickened by the thought.

"Then one of the Japanese held a rifle at my back and prodded me with the muzzle. I then tasted the meat. The two girls were forced to do likewise.

"The Japanese laughed and made fun of us. Then they spread a mat and forced my sister, Emiliana (14), and Felisa, (20), my elder brother's wife, to make love to them."

The girls were carried off that night and never seen again.

Lieut. Hajime Ainoda, an army medical corpsman, in his confession admitted that the Japanese also ate one another.

"Human meat was eaten by the Suzuki Unit," he said, "due to the desperate physical condition of our men from malnutrition and salt deficiency," because of the lack of animal meat.

"Whenever possible we avoided killing, by eating the bodies of people who died from illness, or were killed in action or were executed for crimes. I know that at least two bodies of Japanese soldiers were eaten by us. (Hussey found evidence at least 10 were eaten.)

"I have been asked whether it is not dangerous to eat the body of one who died from malaria or other disease. My answer as a doctor is that if the meat is sufficiently boiled the danger of infection is removed."

Pvt. Maszteru Gushiken, an Okinawan, told of a woman being killed and eaten last September, and of decapitating a girl on another food mission.

Rikimi Yamamoto told of breakfasting last February on the body of a Japanese soldier who had died of natural causes.

"We frequently ate human meat as our dinner. Boiled it with vegetables and ate it. Meat was brought into camp by patrols who had cut it up and dressed it, Yomamoto said.

"Sometimes the meat was dried and sun-cured. Since no other meat was available, we had to eat human flesh. For this reason, Filipinos were captured and butchered. I was so hungry I ate it, although I would have preferred pork."

Lieut. Col. Fumio Susuki, the unit leader, who committed suicide after his capture, was opposed to cannibalism. He had a private executed for cannibalism, but the executioners later dug up the private's body secretly and ate it.

The 31 Japanese will go on trial for their lives next month.

Late Medical Data Told on Eve of Session

(From Press Dispatches)

Atlantic City, N. J., June 8.—The latest developments in medicine were revealed to members of the American Medical Association here today in advance of the association's annual convention, which begins tomorrow.

Medical men were told by one of a trio of speakers at the association's centennial religious service today that America, because of its position and strength, could prevent all international war.

The speakers were the Rev. Ralph C. Hutchinson, president of Lafayette (Pa.) College; Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen, of Catholic University, Washington, and Rabbi Joshua L. Liebman, of Boston.

Sheen said State-controlled medicine would develop when "the doctor loses his love of humanity and his desire to serve him in his ills."

Better or No World

Liebman declared the world "is going to have to become better than it has been before or there will be no world."

Hutchinson said the United States could prevent war "if we will step out and proclaim imperialism of peace and freedom.

Among the developments announced at preconvention sessions, were the following:

A new powder for surgeon's gloves. Made of cornstarch, it is absorbed into the body, cannot cause adhesions which often necessitate reoperations.

A new treatment for asthma. It includes injections of alcohol which open the circulatory system, relax the patient and produce a "mild jag" as a "pleasant side effect."

No treatment for sterility in men—except to feed, soothe and rest them.

The American College of Chest Physicians stated flatly that streptomycin is not a cure for tuberculosis. It has saved lives in two kinds of tuberculosis for which there is no treatment and which in the past have been 100 per cent fatal. These are miliary and tuberculosis meningitis. These facts were given in a report by Dr. Paul Bunn of 6617 East ave., Chevy Chase, Md.

Dr. Paul R. Hawley, medical director for the Veterans Administration, told presidents of State medical associations that "a grasping and selfish" 10 per cent of physicians can give the profession a "bad reputation." He suggested that medical groups which attempt to charge the VA "all the traffic would bear" might be the cause of the "clamor now in Congress for some regulations of the practice of medicine."

Establishment of "bone banks" in large cities, using bones from persons killed in accidents, was seen as a possibility by Dr. Leonard F. Bush of New York Orthopedic Hospital. He described "deep-freeze" methods of preserving human bones indefinitely for medical use.

Controlled Prices in London Are Higher Than New York's

London, June 8 (U.P.).—Mrs. American Housewife gets more for her dollar than her British counterpart, dispite English price controls.

Armed with a current copy of an American newspaper, the United Press London staff priced, item by item, the goods offered in display advertisements.

When prices were added up, the London average for food, clothing and furniture was 37 per cent higher than in New York.

The result surprised even Londoners who believed their carefully controlled and subsidized prices were lower than those in the United States.

It was found that a dollar's worth of food in New York costs $1.16.4 in London. Many clothing and furniture items were unobtainable.

London's current price index was compared to U. S. prices:

General groceries	137.7
Dairy products	67.7
Bakery products	92.6
Meats	70.8
Fish	115.1
Vegetables	198.8

The British may purchase legally only 26.8 cents worth of meat a week, of which almost 7 cents worth must be in corned beef. That means the average Briton can buy about 9 cents of meat for one week.

He gets milk for 15 cents a quart—but the ration is three pints weekly. He gets nine bread coupons a week but must surrender two for a loaf of bread and two for a pound of cake.

Here are some comparative prices:

Item.	New York	London
Spam, 12 ounce can	.35	.55
Tomato soup, 10½ ounce can	.09	.12
Salad dressing, pint jar	.35	.56
Flour, 5 lb. bag	.43	.28
Coffee, pound	.40	.60
Tea, per lb.	.41	.30
Chicken, per lb.	.43	.59
Sirloin steak, lb.	.69	.34
Frankfurters, lb.	.49	.57
Halibut steak, lb.	.39	.46
Oranges, 8 lb. bag	.49	$1.07
String beans, 2 lb. bag	.27	.91
Women's cotton blouses	1.60	11.88
Women's linen suits	$7.95	$13.98
Women's summer dress	$2.17	$4.82
3-pc. living room suite	$169.00	$197.95
3-pc. bedroom set	$119.00	$216.48

Cadillac
PRESTIGE

It is one of the priceless satisfactions, when you own a Cadillac, to know that people everywhere approve of your choice. Wherever roads lead and wheels turn, there is general agreement that Cadillac is first among the world's motor cars. Naturally, such prestige could only come from unquestioned leadership over a long period of time—for time is the basic ingredient in a motor car's reputation.

If you are waiting for a new Cadillac—please be assured that every effort is being made to further production. Demand is so great, however, that some delay in delivery is still inevitable. But hold to your purpose! There is no substitute for a Cadillac.

HARRY S. TRUMAN

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

WE are 50,000 American workers, organized into the American trade-unions.

We are mechanics, helpers, typists, stenographers, doctors, lawyers, teachers, newspapermen, farmers and lots more.

We are Protestants, Catholics, Jews, Negroes and represent nearly all nationalities.

We are members of UE, Auto, Steel, Rubber, Chemical, Paper, Brewery, Public, Office and Professional, Utility, Farm, Teacher's Unions and Newspaper Guild and all the CIO. Multiply us by our families and we represent an overwhelming majority of the people in our community.

We are from a great American City, Dayton, Ohio—U. S. A. We are proud of our achievements in War and Peace for they are second to none in the nation. We represent a cross section of America itself.

SENATORS TAFT AND BRICKER . . . REPRESENTATIVES BURKE AND BENDER DO NOT SPEAK FOR THE CITIZENS OF DAYTON!

THE Mayor of our great city, Mayor Edward Breen, set April, 1947 aside as "Defend Labor Month." Said Mayor Breen, "Dayton's working people thus organized have given dignity to our City by maintaining fair wage levels and promoting an active interest in community affairs, thus resulting in a betterment of Dayton."

"During this month, labor and its friends are dedicated to the protection of the many gains that have occurred to the nation as a result of their struggle for fair wages and broader participation in community affairs."

- ✓ 60,000 Dayton citizens have signed 'STOP ANTI-LABOR LEGISLATION' petitions.
- ✓ Tens of thousands of our Daytonians have wired, written and communicated with the President, Senators Taft and Bricker and Representatives Burke and Bender!
- ✓ Our community is mobilizing as never before to block reactionaries now and in 1948! Philip Murray, President of the CIO, summarizes our position when he says, "anti-labor laws are the first step to fascism."

We urge you Mr. President.. Keep America Free!

Barter Theater Begins 15th Season Tonight in Abingdon

By Richard L. Coe

VIRGINIA'S BARTER THEATER opens its fifteenth season down in Abingdon tonight.

The depression-inspired theater last year benefited from a State grant of $10,000, which it again will receive for its '47-'48 schedule.

Robert Porterfield

While that sum doesn't begin to fill the budget for the year-round professional company, it does make the first steps of its program possible. The rest depends on public acceptance and the touring of last season indicates the public emphatically does accept it.

Founder-Director Robert Porterfield, in reporting on the company's first touring season, says that it played 353 performances in 112 communities through nine Southern States.

This puts the Barter Theater in the upper brackets of the country's theatrical companies on performances alone. Those were on a repertory basis employing three distinct companies in 14 plays, six of which toured. This puts Porterfield's group in a class by itself.

It means, too, that State-subsidized theater in this country is a sound investment so long as the group is under the direction of knowing, capable people such as Porterfield and his assistants.

The only other of our 48 States to subsidize a theatrical company is North Carolina, which July 1 will present the tenth annual production of Paul Green's dramatic pagent, "The Lost Colony."

Abingdon's schedule next year plans to add eight more States on its midwinter tour. After the summer season of 14 weeks in Abingdon, Barter will tour the State for six months, coming as close to Washington as Alexandria and Arlington. Then a two-month tour of the South will send companies as far as Florida and Texas.

"John Loves Mary" Opener

While Abingdon's 378 miles from the capital make it too long for a weekend jaunt (at least too long for our idea of a weekend!), it's a spot to consider for a novel vacation trip. The town's in the Virginia Highlands and the company's theater is the old Opera House on Main Street.

This, Porterfield tells us, was built in 1830 and he thinks it's the second oldest theater in this country. It's got exceptional acoustics and sight lines. Last year a scene dock was built over the old site of the town lock-up. Each summer police headquarters serve as the Barter's box office.

The all-professional company will include Helen Hayes' choices in her capacity as winner of the '47 Barter Award. These youngsters are Marion Wilson, 23, of Buhl, Idaho, and Ray Boyle, 22, a Pittsburgher who scored last winter in the Experimental Theater's "The Great Campaign."

Miss Hayes picked them from nearly 500 aspirants in Gotham auditions. Former Award selections include Gregory Peck and Margaret Phillips who won this year's Clarence Derwent award for her work in "Another Part of the Forest."

Abingdon's plays this year include "John Loves Mary," the opener, now a current New York hit, as was last season's opener, "State of the Union;" "East Lynne," which was first played in 1861 and hasn't stopped since; "The Importance of Being Earnest" and "Arsenic and Old Lace." Within the first two weeks the system will be underway whereby three plays will be on the playbills each week.

So, Abington, Porterfield and Barterites, happy landings for another bang-up year!

"Open City" Returns

"OPEN CITY," as you've probably noticed, is back in town at the Pix.

Like the Hippodrome's "Angel and Sinner," "Open City" is a key to the front page stories from Europe today. Besides being a remarkably fine film, "Open City" suggests unrest of a country.

By watching the horrors of a few Italians during the occupation of their country, it is only a step of the imagination to get a glimpse of Italy's chaos today. The collaborators' treason, the children's stark upbringing and above all, the memories of what occupation meant cannot be ended by the stroke of a pen.

Anna Magnani's superb portrait of a faithful Italian woman and Aldo Fabrizi's acting as the priest are both memorable. The film is now in its second New York year.

The Pix' print, incidentally, has seen better days, which is too bad, since the film itself was made under technical hardships. This seems to be a recurrent difficulty with return engagements of foreign films.

Steamed Suits Secret Of Dresser's Success

New York.—Tony de Marco, whose name has appeared on many best-dressed lists, still wears suits which were tailored for him as long ago as 1924. And these suits look new. "The trick is never to have them pressed," De Marco explains. "If a man has enough suits to change into he can wear them for 20 years if he wants to. All he has to do is hang them properly at night, never press them, and when he finds they have creases at the elbows and the knees, just hang them over a bathtub of steaming water."

Jack Benny

For appearing with Jack Benny at the opening show at the Roxy, Fred Allen received a watch from A. J. Balaban, the managing director of the Roxy. . . . Benny, who is ending a record-breaking two weeks at the theater, received a record price for his appearance. Benny saw Allen's watch, quickly tabulated what his own net would be—after paying his cast, traveling expenses and the over 90 per cent income taxes—and proposed: "Fred, I'll make a swap with you. Give me the watch in return for my act for the two weeks." Allen quickly tabulated the increase in his own income, and his over-90 per cent tax rate—and wisely refused to swap.

The California papers, in announcing that George S. Kaufman would go to N. Y. to shoot scenes for "The Senator Was Indiscreet," said that because of the plane accidents he would make the trip by train. The fact is that Kaufman never flies. Once, during a collaboration with Moss Hart, someone suggested that they make a will advising what should be done with their incomplete script in case they were victims of a plane crash. "The only time such a thing could happen," said one of Kaufman's friends, "would be if Moss' plane crashed on top of George at the airport where he was seeing Moss off."

George, the bartender at Gallagher's, found a $60,000 check drawn by a General Motors executive. He brought the check to the executive's office, and was rewarded with a $20 bill . . . Mrs. Charles Lederer, leading batsman of the Hecht-MacArthur Baseball League at Nyack, told Jimmy Cannon that she learned to play baseball at Dayton—where she played second base on the Officers Team while her husband was stationed there. "There was a shortage of officers, so they took me," explained Mrs. Lederer. Ex-Sergt. Cannon shook his head in disbelief. "I was in the Army for five years," he said, "and there never was a shortage of officers when I was around."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Arms for Argentina Decision Momentous

By Drew Pearson

THE FINAL decision to sell arms to President Peron of Argentina and to oust Peron's enemy, Spruille Braden, as Assistant Secretary of State probably will go down in history as one of the most momentous the United States has made in many years. It was attended by some soul-searching conferences inside the State Department with Braden lined up on one side and various military advisers on the other.

Peron

Because the decision was so important, it may be well to review some of the backstage arguments put forward by both sides.

Chief point which big, burly Spruille Braden made to Secretary Marshall was that the United States and Argentina enjoyed perfectly normal relations in every possible way except one—namely, the United States declined to sell Peron arms. We exchange ambassadors. We buy all the goods Argentina will sell us except fresh meat. And we have unfrozen all Argentine credits in the United States. However, argued Braden, Argentina is a dictatorship suspected by other Latin-American neighbors of having designs on their territory. Therefore, the United States should not increase her power by selling arms.

Others of Marshall's advisers, especially his old friends in the War Department, maintained that if the United States is to build up an anti-Soviet bloc in the Western Hemisphere it must cooperate with the Argentine army and navy.

Braden, in turn, brought out a copy of the Argentine 5-year plan, a highly illuminating document, indicating that President Peron planned to set up a vigorous Fascist state right under the nose of the Pan American Union.

Braden also pointed out that Peron had trained for a time under Roberto Farinacci, Secretary General of the Italian Fascist Party, and that two of his chief supporters were Ludwig Freude, a German Nazi, and Heinrich Doerge, former adviser to Hjalmar Schacht.

Peron's 5-Year Plan

THE PERON 5-year plan, which Braden condensed for General Marshall's study, is a sweeping blueprint to build up Argentina as the most powerful military nation in South America. It calls for stepping up the Argentine birth rate, control of all raw material in South America, dispersal of Argentine industry as a protection against bombing, intensive experimentation in atomic laboratories, control of the judiciary and other suppressive measures.

Braden also pointed out that the 5-year plan was not merely a document on paper, but actually was being put into effect. Here are some of the 5-year steps Peron already has taken.

1. Control of the Judiciary.—Four out of five judges on the Argentine Supreme Court already have been impeached. Peron did not even give them a trial. The fifth judge was a Peron stooge. Scores of other lesser judge shave been ousted.

2. Control of Education.—Peron has already fired 700 professors from the Argentine universities. He has also placed his national universities, hitherto to centers of prodemocratic thought, under the control of six especially selected pro-Peron rectors. Finally, he has established his own National Council of Education with authority to run all primary and secondary schools. This is the pattern followed by Hitler and Mussolini when they came into power.

3. Control of Labor.—The Confederacion General de Trabajadores, largest labor union in Argentina, has been taken over by Peron. No strike can be called if Peron opposes. Union men calling a strike are summarily fined, in some cases jailed.

Freedom of Press ?

4. Control of Press.—While there is official freedom of the press, Peron exercises powerful indirect control by his supervision of newsprint, his influence over newspaper labor unions, and the practice of levying fines on hostile newspapers which violate official ordinances.

5. Control of Movies and Radio.—The Argentine government now owns the two largest radio stations in the country. All other stations are required to submit advance radio scripts on political questions for censorship. Several motion picture houses have been closed for showing pictures disrespectful of the government.

6. Secret Police.—Person has established his own secret police, based on the Nazi and Soviet pattern. Several hundred Gestapo agents are on the lookout for anyone hostile to the Peron regime. Result is that some of the top officers of the navy who were too "independent" have been dismissed.

7. Argentine Expansion—In addition to increasing the Argentine birth rate, the Peron five-year plan calls for selective immigration from Europe. Peron has sent two special commissions to Spain and Italy to select "racially pure" immigrants. His goal is to increase Argentina's population from its present 14 million to 100 million in the next 50 years.

These were some of the things Braden put before Marshall and Truman in arguing that the United States could not afford to sell arms to a potentially Fascist nation. In the end, he was overruled, chiefly on the ground that the United States needed a solid hemisphere against Russia and that not even Argentina could be left out of that solidarity.

Note.—One factor contributing to Braden's reversal was Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, who long has favored closer relations with Argentina. It was Vandenberg who helped bring Argentina into the United Nations at San Francisco.

Big Business Admits Lobbying

THE NATIONAL Association of Manufacturers operates one of the smoothest and most powerful lobbies in Washington—usually from behind the scenes. But recently they have come out with an amazingly frank admission. Not only do they state that they are lobbying but they ask Congressmen how they can strengthen their lobby.

The NAM has just circulated a letter to all Congressmen who voted for the Hartley Labor bill. Presumably the manufacturers considered these Congressmen their friends. In the letter, they frankly asked various questions as to how the NAM could improve its lobbying methods.

Here are two of the most significant questions asked:

"Would it be more helpful from your standpoint if NAM urged its members to stir up sentiment back home instead of using national advertising?

"When the next bill comes along in the Senate, would you like to see a similar advertising campaign by NAM supporting tax reductions?"

Note to Constituents.—In view of the NAM questionnaire, it might be interesting for a Congressman's constituents to send him a questionnaire inquiring what influences—such as campaign contributions—determined his vote on certain key questions.

'Smoky' Virginia

Virginia Hunter, former Columbia contract dancer, was cast in an important role in the musical film, "Smoky River Serenade." Miss Hunter's last big dancing role was in the Rita Hayworth-Larry Parks technicolor musical, "Down to Earth."

Lloyd's 'Blondes'

Immediately after he winds up his role in Columbia's "Key Witness," Jimmy Lloyd will step into the male lead, opposite Jean Porter, of "Two Blondes and a Redhead," musical being produced by Sam Katzman for Columbia release.

MANGRUM MAKES MERRY—Lloyd Mangrum was so happy over his victory in the National Capital Open yesterday that he borrowed a bag pipe from a member of the Washington Scottish pipe band and struck up a merry little tune on the eighteenth green. The band was on hand to lend a musical touch to the finish of the 72-hole event, serenading the players as they left the eighteenth green. Surrounding the jubilant Mangrum in the photo on the left are, left to right, Myra Pittenger, of Takoma Park; Mary O'Meyer, of Silver Spring; Martha Jean Crawford, of College Park, and Louise Mills, of Seattle, Wash. Center, Porky Oliver extends a congratulatory hand to Mangrum just after the National Open champion holed out on the seventy-second hole. Mangrum played with Oliver and Bobby Locke (white shirt). On the right, Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of Maryland U., presents Mangrum with his check and Bobby Brownell, of Chevy Chase, with a trophy for being low amateur

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

OUT IN CLEVELAND, club owner Bill Veeck has recognized a mistake, and is admitting it, although not quite cheerfully. The fence he stretched across the outfield of his Cleveland park in an attempt to invite more home runs off the bats of his Indians has backfired as a piece of Veeck strategy. Of the 20 cheap homers the fence has gathered in since the start of the season, only 6 have been hit by the Indians and 14 by the opposition.

POVICH

And so Veeck is moving the fence back 20-odd feet, inasmuch as the iron barrier adopted so coldly an impersonal attitude as not to give a darn who was hitting the home runs over it. Of course he could put it on rollers and shift the fence at will, depending on which club was in town, but even Veeck shrinks from that bare-faced manipulation of home-run territory.

The big idea of Cleveland's shortened outfield was to make it easier for Joe Gordon, obtained during the winter from the Yankees, to get his balls into home-run territory, but Gordon hasn't been getting many hits of any kind. And Pat Seerey, who is the club's big home-run threat, hits the ball nearly out of sight when he does connect solidly, and needs no overly convenient barrier.

THE UPSHOT HAS been that the Indians have been taking a beating in the battle of synthetic homers. Clark Griffith, who toyed with the idea of shortening his park in left field last season by putting seats in front of the bleachers, quickly abandoned the whole idea in panic one day when Don Gutteridge of the Red Sox banged one into the temporary seats.

Gutteridge's wallop of about 365 feet was the clincher for Griffith, who announced the seats were coming out of left field. "We might get a few more homers," he said, "but that short field makes home-run hitters out of too many other guys in the league, and we'd be murdered if we left the seats in." Thus was the size and shape of Griffith Stadium for 1947 decided.

The business of moving fences is no new one. In Pittsburgh, the new owners constructed "Greenberg Gardens" in left field shortly after acquiring big Hank from the Detroit Tigers. It was done by building a bullpen in front of the left field wall, shortening the distance from the plate to 360 feet for Greenberg's convenience. But that move hasn't gotten the Pirates out of the second division yet.

SEVERAL YEARS AGO, in Chicago, the White Sox moved home plate 15 feet nearer the fences after buying Al Simmons to give him a better home-run target. But Simmons was slipping as a great hitter by that time, and after they traded him to Detroit, the White Sox hastily restored the field to its original dimensions before too many cheap homers by the opposition could murder them.

The all-time high in movable fences was noted by the Nats in 1942 when they played the star-filled Norfolk Naval Station team at Norfolk, where the commandant's order of the day to his men always read: "Win today's game." The sailors beat the Nats a couple of times hand running, but were given a fright in the second game when Jake Early hit two homers over the right-field wall, represented by a two-foot wooden fence. When the Nats appeared for the next day's game there no longer was a fence in right field. Overnight, a construction gang had removed it.

THE LEAST SYNTHETIC home-run hitter in the American League is Ted Williams, who has the toughest target to shoot for in his home field, Fenway Park. Even with the bullpen erected in right center, Williams must clout the ball nearly 400 feet to get a homer, and there can be no complaints with the home-run totals he amasses.

Yankee Stadium was a setup for Ruth and Gehrig with its short right-field distances, but Charley Keller, though also a left-handed hitter, and Joe DiMaggio, a right-hander, don't get the same good break Ruth and Gehrig had.

Keller's tough luck is that he is not a pull hitter like Ruth and Gehrig, and in right center, where he directs most of his drives, the Yankee Stadium distances are forbidding. DiMaggio has little to shoot at in the way of home-run territory in left field in the stadium, unless he pulls the ball directly down the left-field line, where homers come cheaply. The left-field distance increases sharply away from the foul line, and any DiMaggio home run that isn't near the line is an unqualifiedly swell wallop.

Feller Takes 7th; Tribe, Macks Split

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—Bob Feller, pride of the Cleveland Indians, blanked the Philadelphia Athletics, 2-0, on three hits today for his fourth shutout of the year after the Athletics took the first game, 4-0. It was Feller's seventh triumph of the season.

Phil Marchildon registered his fifth victory of the season and his first shutout limiting the Indians to four runs in the opener.

Marchildon walked only one man and permitted only one player to get as far as second base.

Ferris Fain hit his second home run of the season to start the Philadelphia scoring in the second inning.

Decidedly an in-an-outer lately, Iowa Bob apparently felt "right" today, and he didn't give the A's a hit until the sixth inning when Shortstop Eddie Joost lined a sharp single to left.

In the eighth inning—the only time Feller encountered trouble—Joost got another single, and Barney McCoskey followed suit. But with a man on third, Feller forced the next two to pop up and put himself in the league shut-out lead.

Newhouser Beats Red Sox by 5-0

Detroit, June 8 (AP).—Driving out Dave (Boo) Ferriss with a three-run spree in the seventh inning, the Detroit Tigers whipped the Boston Red Sox 5 to 0 before 55,941 fans here today as Hal Newhouser yielded just four hits in achieving his third shutout win of the year.

Newhouser drove in the first two runs himself to provide the margin of victory over Ferriss. Hoot Evers singled in another run in the seventh and two more followed on a double by George Kell, returning to the line-up after a spiking injury.

Boston didn't get a man beyond second base as Newhouser gained his sixth victory against six defeats. It was the fifth setback for Ferriss who has won four.

Walt Masterson Hurls 16 Innings

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

Chicago, June 8.—The Nats had to equal an all-time baseball record plus a magnificent 16-inning scoreless pitching performance on the part of Walter Masterson to win their first game of the season after seven straight defeats from the White Sox here today.

They took the opening game of a ball history made.

But then, lapsing into their doormat role for the Chisox, they dropped the finale, 8-2, as Chick Pieretti took his lumps before 29,629 fans who turned out for Luke Appling Day and saw baseball history made.

The Nats got 10 hits off Bob Gillespie in the nightcap, but were never in the game after the second inning.

Although Masterson yielded the ship in the last two innings to Early Wynn, who thereby won his sixth game of the year, the veteran of only 27 years was pitching the greatest game of his career.

Sought Fifth Victory

He was trying for his fifth victory of the season, a triumph that would have equaled his best year's winning mark in five full seasons and part of another as a Nat. Before the start of this season he had won only 20 games, an average of approximately four per year.

The 1-0 verdict ties a mark of years standing and is the fourth one-run ball game of 18 innings in baseball. Strangely enough, on July 15, 1918, these same two teams played one of those three record contests with Washington, then as today, winning. The last time a 1-0 18-inning game was played was 14 years ago when the Cards and Giants battled it out on July 2, 1933.

For 13 innings, Masterson was opposed by Frank Papish, Chisox lefthander, who went into the game with another string of 13 consecutive scoreless innings including a shutout against the Athletics in his last start.

In the fourteenth Papish was relieved by Earl Harrist, who surrendered one run in five innings but it happened to be the payoff tally and he was tagged with the loss. Seven hits were all the Nats could get off this pair.

The big run that settled things came about, thanks to the bats of Al Evans and Sherry Robertson. Evans opened the eighteenth with a lazy triple that dropped several feet inside the right-field line. Robertson, who had replaced Eddie Yost at third in the thirteenth, came up and banged out a long fly that let Evans count easily with the only run.

Wynn, who replaced Masterson in the 17th, retired six Chisox in order to gain the victory.

Masterson was something out of this world.

In the 16 innings he pitched he gave the Chisox only six hits, all singles and not more than one to an inning. He fanned seven and walked six, two purposely.

59 Men Face Masterson

Against him the Chisox managed to get only three runners to second and only one as far as third. Altogether he pitched to only 59 men in that 16-inning stretch.

In the fifth, Taft Wright stole second, after forcing Kolloway, who had singled. But Masterson made Tresh and Papish beat easy grounders into the dirt.

From that point until the thirteenth, the Sox never threatened. The only interruptions of Masterson's wizarddy were on two-out singles by Kolloway in the seventh and Floyd Baker in the eighth.

From the eighth to the thirteenth, Masterson retired 13 men

18 Innings? It's Just Old Stuff to Nats

YESTERDAY'S lengthy contest, which the Nats won, 1-0, in the 18th inning, caused a scramble for the record book, and the findings show that the Nats seem to have a penchant for drawn-out engagements.

The game tied one major league record but fell short of several others.

It equaled the mark for 1-0 games set previously in three ball games. In 1882 Providence downed Detroit, 1-0, in 18 frames, and in 1918 the Nats and White Sox did exactly the same thing as yesterday; the Nats winning, 1-0. The most recent 18-inning, 1-0, contest took place in 1933, with the Giants defeating the Cards.

The Nats played a 0-0, 18-inning game with Detroit in 1909, and in 1946, the Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds went 19 innings to a scoreless tie. The grand daddy of all shutouts was the Pittsburgh-Boston game which the Braves won in 20 innings, 2-0, back in 1918.

THE longest game ever played in the majors was the 26-inning marathon in which Boston and Brooklyn played to a 1-1 deadlock in 1920. The Athletics and Red Sox went 24 innings in 1906, with the A's winning, 4-1, and as recently as 1945 the Tigers and A's played a 24-inning 1-1 tie.

Walt Masterson's 16 innings of scoreless ball fell 4 short of the American League record of 20 shutout innings in a single game, set by Joseph Harris of Boston vs. Philadelphia in 1906. Boston lost that game, 4-1, in 24 innings.

The major league mark is 21 scoreless innings, set by Joseph Oeschger of the Braves in the Boston-Brooklyn 26-inning game mentioned above. Oeschger's mound opponent in that tilt, Leon Cadore, pitched 20 scoreless frames.

Incidentally, the Nats fell eight innings short of tying the American League record for feebleness. When they finally scored a run in the eighteenth, they snapped a string of 33 consecutive scoreless innings. Cleveland went 41 frames without a score in 1903, but the Nats came close.

Phils Divide With Pirates

Philadelphia, June 8 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates and the Philadelphia Phillies divided a doubleheader here today before 18,551.

The Phils won the first game, 5-2, behind the nine-hit hurling of Dutch Leonard, who won his own game in the fourth when he cleared the bases with a two-bagger.

In the second game, Ralph Kiner hit his second home run of the day and his ninth of the year with the score tied at 4-4 in the ninth inning to give the Pirates a 5-4 victory.

Horseman

By Don Henderson

THE Frankstown Hunt Club of Altoona, Pa., has a good and enthusiastic organization. Their hunter trials of last week showed that they know what it is all about. Good going, well considered fences and generally good performances. While the going up hill and straight away, was uniformly good, when the down hill gallops came, then the judge, Jack Prestage, was able to do a bit of culling.

Hunts represented were Westmoreland, Sewickley, Chestnut Ridge, Harts Run, Rolling Rock, Beaufort and Frankstown.

The big bay, Thurston, imported by Dick Mellon last year from Ireland, was the outstanding hunter and jumper, aided by good rides by J. Wattes, the Rolling Rock M. F. H. This horse was one of the winning pair, one of the winning hunt team and also winner of the Lester S. March Memorial Bowl.

Hilo Jack, with Richard Guyer, took the junior hunter honors. E. C. Rothwell's mare Elena placed third in the memorial event and was on the second pair in that class. Hilo Jack was on the third pair.

Ann Gray Easily Wins Gals Crown

By Glenn Williams

Gardner Larned defeated Bernard Bartzen, 4—6, 6—2, 7—5, 6—3, in the final round of the Northern Virginia Invitation Tennis Tournament at the Army-Navy Country Club yesterday before a crowd of 1000 people.

The lanky Larned, ranked first in the tournament, was extended to the limit by Bartzen, seeded second, but had enough power and steadiness to come out on top.

Both men played a forcing, smashing game, with every point hotly contested. Larned, a player of the Tilden type, made good use of his advantage in height at the net, but the stockier, left-handed Bartzen kept in the running with accurate passing shots.

In the women's singles, Ann Gray repeated her last week's triumph in the City of Washington Tournament by again downing Charlotte Decker, 6—2, 6—3. Miss Gray was just too steady for Miss Decker and had little trouble winning the title.

Larned and Bartzen returned to the court after their singles match and together captured the men's doubles, defeating Dr. Dave Johnsen and Donald Leavens, 6—1, 6—1, 3—1. Johnsen and Leavens defaulted in the third set as rain began to fall.

In the mixed doubles, Ann Gray and Phil Neff defeated Charlotte Decker and Jim Farrin, 6—4, 6—2.

Gannon, Stribling In Ring Duel Tonight

Jimmy Lake

Ken Stribling, the local colored middleweight who has spoiled the boxing aspirations of several District hopefuls, will attempt to do it again tonight at Griffith Stadium, this time in a 10-round feature match with Joe Gannon, the 20-year-old pride from the Glen Drake fistic stable.

Stribling is known by the boxing boys as a "spoiler," a title he first earned during the early days of the war when he came up against a 6-1 favorite in Frankie Wills one night, and proceeded to win with ease. Several others felt the sting of his fists, but his most recent upset came a few months ago against Frank Sweeney, who was riding along on a victory wave of eight matches, only to be knocked out in three rounds.

Tonight Washington fans will find out whether Stribling is to be reckoned with in the fistic picture, or whether Gannon can live up to his 1944-45 form and go on to become a local sensation, just as Aaron Perry, Bee Bee Washington did, and Smuggy Hursey is doing at the present.

In fact, it became quite definite during the past week that the Gannon-Stribling winner would meet Bee Bee on July 7 at the ball park, and that the victor of that bout would oppose Hursey either late in July or early in August.

Gannon had a brilliant amateur career winning the local Golden Gloves title and capturing the National A. A. U. crown. He outpointed Sweeney at the ball park in 1945 in his last local headline shot, went overseas and while in Europe with the Army took the First Division, Third Army, E. T. O. and another important European military title for a light-heavyweight "grand slam."

Back in this country he engaged in eight pro bouts, losing only to Oscar Wakefield in a Baltimore ring when he was stricken with appendicitis. But he came back to flatten Wakefield in a few rounds in a return go. Thus in more than 60 matches Gannon has lost but one.

The 10-round added feature will find Jackie Cranford, the big blond local heavyweight, boxing Jimmy Lake, of Montreal, former Canadian Royal Air Corps hero, who recently whipped Sanders Cox in New York. Cranford did some terrific boxing last year when he cut down Buddy Komar and Ross Strickland at the Arena in sensational fashion. He was quite a hit at Madison Square Garden, and hopes to return there soon.

The supporting card is full of familiar local figures who have been headlined. One is Jimmy McGriff, who boxes Bobby Suma in a six. Art Bethea goes against Jimmy Briscoe in a six and Puggy King, the former amateur star, tackles Henry Young. Popular prices of $2, $4 and $6.50 will prevail, with tickets only on sale at the ball park.

Eagles Beat Grays, 5 to 4

The league-leading Newark Eagles beat the Washington Homestead Grays, 5-4, in the opening game of their Negro National League double-header yesterday at Griffith Stadium. The second game was called in the fifth with the score tied 1-1.

Bud Easter provided what power the Grays could muster in the opener, driving in the tieing run in the third with a 420-foot triple to the deep center field corner.

The Eagles won the game in the seventh inning when Phil Doby doubled with two men on base and both scored. Darkness halted the second game.

Coaches Go To School at Maryland

College Park, June 8 (AP).—The University of Maryland athletic staff announced a 10-day school for prep and college coaches of the Maryland - Virginia - West Virginia area starting June 23.

Chief interest is expected to center on the football course conducted by Jim Tatum, new Terp coach, and the high-powered gridiron staff he has rounded up since he came to Maryland from the University of Oklahoma in February.

The university will credit participants with one and two college hours for each course.

In the football school, Tatum will be assisted by Walt Driskill, who coached with him at Oklahoma and in the Navy; George T. Barclay, another Navy coaching associate and a teammate at North Carolina; backfield coach, Houston Elder; end coach, Fulcie Stewart, and his training expert, James A. Wyre.

H. Burton Shipley, Maryland baseball mentor and dean of Old Line coaches; John E. Faber, longtime lacrosse coach, and Heinie Miller, head boxing coach, will preside over their respective subjects in the short course.

It's in Writing, His Wife Can't Bother Him!

San Antonio, Tex., June 8 (U.P.)—T. Ralston Chapin, an end on the 1947 Thomas Jefferson football team and one of Tulane University's newest recruits, made doubly sure today that his wife-to-be wouldn't follow him when he dons the Green Wave uniform to battle for the New Orleans school.

On file in the office of County Clerk Fred Huntress here was a marital agreement setting forth that Chapin had been awarded a scholarship at Tulane University in return for his ability on the football field. The agreement stipulated that Chapin would receive room and board, tuition and $10 a month.

The agreement set forth that "following the culmination of said proposed marriage between the parties, the party of the second part hereby agrees that she will remain in San Antonio, Tex., her home, and will not attempt to follow the first party when he enters Tulane University at New Orleans . . ."

The agreement said that "the presence of said second party at the scene of the first party's training detail would work an added handicap upon said first party . . . which would prove too severe for said first party to put forth his best efforts in athletics competition. . . ."

DEAR FOLKS: At CharlesTown.

Jockey Albert Vesseli, who was believed to have been uninjured in a spill last week, suffered a badly bruised shoulder. Jockey Julius Hamilton left for the North Randall (Ohio) track and expects to return for the Maryland half-mile season. Favorites have been doing well here. In the first 64 races, 24 choices got home. As I have been writing, there are several excellent prospects among the apprentice jockeys here. Robert Shirey stepped into the limelight on the last Friday program with two winners in a row for his boss, Ray Bates. I looked up the youngster over the weekend and found him to be an ambitious little gentleman and no stranger to horses. From Buffalo Mills, Pa., Shirey, who will be 22 in September, went to Lexington, Ky., to try a hand at exercising horses on a farm. This spring he joined Owner-Trainer Bates and rode his first and only winner at Beulah Park before coming here. So far he has had 29 mounts getting 21 of them in the money. Calvin Bowling is making his engagements and promises to get the youngster plenty of work. While on the subject of good riding, friend Danny Scocca is at top form. He hasn't had much stock to work with but his winning rides have been pips. For instance, that fine job aboard Dr. R. Young, the $80 shot in last Saturday's first event. See you on the rail.

Out Fishing...

By Jack Bell

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., June 8.—After giving up our boat to another party last week which included Mary Land, New Orleans, La., and Mary Ainslee, Toronto, Canada, we finally made it our turn to compete in the tarpon roundup Saturday.

Mary Ainslee caught a tarpon weighing 83 pounds and Mary Land boated a tarpon weighing 67 pounds, both fish taking first and tying for second place.

Larry Westcott, Falls Church, Va., our fishing partner Saturday afternoon, boated a tarpon weighing 94 pounds. However, Larry did not land his fish without a lot of sideline help from "Specs" Loher and Leonard Schwartz, Edwardsville, Ill.

Larry's fish measured 5 ft. 9 in. in length and girth 34 in. The fish made 13 clean jumps and took 37 minutes to land and win for Larry the OWAA special trophy and cash prize of $100. As for prizes, Larry stands a good chance to win the weekly cash prize of $25, his fish being the best to be caught this week, which began last Thursday. In the Open Division of Florida's tarpon roundup, Westcott's tarpon holds twelfth place.

LOCAL anglers who are here carried off most of the honors: Bob Wilson, fishing editor of the Times-Herald, took second place in the men's division with a 52-pounder and Stewart Kennard, WFBR, Baltimore, third with a 50-pounder.

Tarpon released unharmed, Joe Dingess, Huntington, W. Va.; Ed Place, Washington (D. C.); Two by James Stuber, Cleveland, Ohio, and a nice fish by your reporter that the skipper "Spec's" Loher said would easily weigh 60 pounds.

Saturday the writers were treated to another marvel of accomplishment by the friendly people of St. Petersburg a sportsman's show that is really something for others to follow example. The show is filled with booths displaying the latest in fishing tackle and such items as wartime airela antenae. Now surplus goods made into fishing rods are conspicuous by their absence.

Today we head for Myakka State Park in three convoys headed by Florida's State police. There we will have opportunity to inspect Florida's latest work in conservation and restoration of wildlife and fish.

Willie Herbert Loses To English Star

Miss Mary Hardwick, one of England's all-time women tennis greats, defeated Miss Willie Herbert of Washington, 6—3, 6—3, yesterday in an exhibition match at the Belle Haven Club.

Miss Herbert gave a good account of herself against the British star, deucing almost every game and making Miss Hardwick play out to win the match.

Didrikson Begins Quest of British Women's Title Today

Jean Donald Elected as Home Hope

Gullane, Scotland, June 8 (AP).—Babe Didrikson Zaharias, topmost of three American bidders for the British women's golf championship, slept until noon today and "rested" all afternoon in confident preparation for tomorrow's start of a four-day grind to the title.

The Babe, still mulling over her best round—a 71 from the full length men's tees yesterday—announced "I'm in good shape." There is no recognized par for the course.

All she did today in the way of golfing was to smack a few long shots at a ball-retrieving caddy.

What's This? A Modest Babe

The Denver woman declined to predict she would win but said, "Of course, I'm certainly going to try. I didn't come over here with the intention of losing, if I can help it."

Golf-crazy Scots elected the home hope almost unanimously. She is Jean Donald, husky 25-year-old daughter of a doctor at North Berwick, four miles down the Firth of Forth from Gullane.

Jean carried a Scottish woman's team to a triumph yesterday in Britain's "international"—a team tournament among squads from Scotland, Ireland, Wales and England. In the process she whipped Philomena Garvey, Irish women's champion and runner-up in last year's British women's title play, 6 and 4.

They May Meet in Semifinal

Earlier in the week, she also trounced the English women's champion, Maureen Ruttle, and the Welch champion, who is not entered in the British tournament, to establish herself as Britain's dominant defender of the title that Mrs. G. W. Hetherington gave up by retiring this year from tournament play.

Miss Donald's threat to Babe's victory would pit the pair against each other in the semifinals if both get that far.

The Babe and both the other American entries—Ruth Woodward of Fall River, Mass., and Helen Sigel of Philadelphia—all were scheduled for two matches tomorrow, if they survive the morning round.

Miss Sigel, runner-up in the U. S. women's championship in 1941, sprained her left hand last night but a Gullane doctor told her she would be able to play tomorrow.

Gardner Wins Golf With 70

Jim Gardner shot a 70 at the Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday to take the low gross prize in yesterday's 18-hole medal play.

D. R. Monsees shot a 79—13—66 for low net honors, followed by H. H. Hair with a 71—4—67 and Franz Richey who came in in 81—14—67.

Belle Haven

Col. Ben Schriever and Eddie Edwards were comedalists in Belle Haven's 18-hole bowl qualifying with two-over par 72's.

Match play in the tourney begins this weekend. Yesterday the Belle Haven golfers whipped Hermitage Country Club of Richmond, 28-26. The teams play a return match in Richmond on July 28.

Washington Aviation

Mrs. L. P. Best, winner of the medal last week, won her first round match in the Mrs. R. C. Doyle Trophy play at Washington Aviation yesterday by downing Mrs. Nan Fears, 5 and 4.

Yesterday's winners and second round pairings:

Mrs. L. P. Best vs. Miss Patsy Miles, Mrs. Richard Fletcher vs. Mrs. E. C. Fitch, Mrs. George Wright vs Mrs. William Minor, Mrs. L. E. Yoder vs. Mrs. E. P. Miles.

Mangrum Takes Open With 269

ell, the Chevy-Chase star who owns the District and Mid-Atlantic titles, Bobby finishes with a par 72 for a 281.

Mangrum played his final round with Locke and Oliver and wasn't too highly touted as the man to watch as the shotmakers prepared to make their last assaults on the course.

Most of the day's gallery of over 5000 trudged around with Snead, Payton and Worsham. Out of that trio, they felt, would come the winner.

For the first eight holes, it looked as if they were right. Worsham was taking the course to pieces. Payton and Snead were just so-so.

Coming to the ninth tee, Worsham was three-under par. But there he messed up his second shot, took a bogey five and finished the side with 34.

Worsham, who had nines of 34, 35, was the leader at the end of four holes where he was three under par but his supremacy was shortlived.

Mangrum, his drives true and his work on the greens terrific, soon overhauled Worsham by scoring birdies on the second, fourth, fifth, sixth and eighth holes. Mangrum made the turn in 31, five under.

On the back side, Mangrum played the card until he reached the fifteenth where he got back into his par-shattering grove and added his sixth and final birdie. He finished the nine in 35 to come home the winner with strokes to spare.

Mangrum Pays Caddy $120 for Four Days

Among the many, many persons who cheered Lloyd Mangrum's victory in yesterday's National Capital Open was Mangrum's caddy, "Shorty."

"Shorty," who asked to carry Mangrum's bag, was given $120 by Mangrum for the four-day, 72-hole grind.

Flyweight Title Fight Postponed

Glasgow, Scotland, June 8 (AP).—Promoter Charles Black tonight announced the postponement of the scheduled 15-round title fight Wednesday between world flyweight champion Jackie Paterson of Glasgow, and challenger Dado Marino of Honolulu.

The fight was tentatively rescheduled for July 9. Black said the bout was put off because Paterson is suffering from a mild case of blood poisoning.

When informed of the postponement, Sad Sam Ichonese, manager of Marino, declared "This is incredible."

Ghezzi Gets 68 On Open Course

St. Louis, June 8 (AP).—Vic Ghezzi gave the United States open course at St. Louis Country Club a promise of things to come today.

The Kansas City, Kans., pro, runner up to Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles in last year's Open, made it around the layout in 68 strokes and apparently didn't strain himself doing it. Neither, he thinks, will numerous other golfers when the 171-man field gets down to business in the three-day tournament starting Thursday.

Merrick Boys Lose

The Merrick Unlimited baseball team dropped a 5-4 decision to Leonardtown yesterday at Leonardtown, Md. Bob Morton stole home with the winning run in the tenth inning.

in order before Kolloway opened that frame with his third safety.

The Sox had their finest scoring chance in the sixteenth when they filled the bases with the help of two walks. With two out, Masterson got Bob Kennedy on a fly ball to center field. Masterson fanned seven of the White Sox.

Bluege Talks to Walter

Dickey opened Chicago's dangerous sixteenth inning with a line single that Priddy touched with a leap but couldn't hold. He was forced by Baker, who in turn was forced by Philley. Masterson then threw wildly trying to pick Philley off first and the Sox outfielder sped to second. Appling was purposely walked. Masterson walked Jones after 3-2 count. That filled the bases.

When Walter tossed two straight balls to Bob Kennedy, Manager Ossie Bluege called time and strode to the mound. But Masterson felt able to continue and on the next pitch enticed Kennedy into hitting a high fly to Spence.

That was Walter's last inning. Early Wynn came along to get six straight Chisox batters in the seventeenth and eighteenth without anything that looked like a hit.

In the eleventh, Yost's single and a walk to Priddy put Nats on first and second. But Vernon grounded out. In the twelfth, Spence's second single and a walk to Evans, once more put Nats on first and second with two out but pinch-hitter Tom McBride, batting for Yost, grounded out.

The Nats made another effort in the seventeenth. Vernon walked and after Lewis, disdaining a sacrificed, flied out, Spence drilled his third single to right, but Christman slapped into a double play.

But it all ended happily in the eighteenth.

Although it took the Nats 18 innings to get a run in the first game, they didn't tarry off Gillespie in the finale, scoring in the first inning. Grace dropped a double in left and Priddy walked. Vernon singled to center to score Grace, but Priddy was out trying for third when Philley cut loose a fine throw to Baker.

The Sox came back strong to get three runs in the first and three more in the second when they finished Pieretti. The first inning trio of tallies came on a double by Baker and singles by Wallaesa, Jones, Kennedy, and Kolloway with a boot by Grace in left field thrown in for good measure.

The Sox upped it to 6-1 in the second, bringing in Scarborough, Gillespie singled and so did Baker. When Pieretti walked the bases to the saturation point, Scarborough was called. Wallaesa greeted him with an infield single for one run, an infield out and a fielders choice netted the other pair.

Singles by Spence, Ferrell and Scarborough got one back for the Nats in the fourth, but any thoughts of a big inning vanished when Grace tapped to Gillespie with two on the sacks.

Singles by Kennedy and Kolloway, a wild throw by Buddy Lewis and a boot by Christman gave the Chisox their final two runs in the seventh which were just so much excessive baggage.

Bobo Newsom, with only two victories to show for five games, will work tomorrow when the Nats invade St. Louis for a three-game lamp-light series.

By way of celebrating Luke Appling day, the Sox shortstop slapped a single and handled 11 chances perfectly. Between games he was presented with an automobile, purchased through the donations of fans, a wrist watch by his teammates; a cash gift from the Sox and fishing equipment by Chicago baseball writers.

Appling was made to gulp and gasp a bit before receiving his new car, when a museum-type automobile reminiscent of Jack Benny's beat-up Maxwell was driven on to the field. But it was just a show-piece and the real car followed in short order.

opportunity knocks

a woman always gets a ring

He may be a diamond in the rough himself, but he surely knows how to pick 'em . . . whether it's something with sparkle and carats . . . or with blue, blue eyes and a turned-up nose. The best is none too good for her . . . so to get better than the best, he naturally goes to Schwartz, where for generations thousands of Washington swains have selected The Rings-of-their-Choice for the Girls-of-Their-Choice. It may be an exquisitely cut diamond, or rubies and pearls, sapphires or emeralds . . . delicately wrought platinum, or a traditional gold band . . . Schwartz will have it, you may be sure. That's because Schwartz covers the compass to provide you with the most perfectly shaped . . . the most flawless gems. And, too, it's because Schwartz craftsmen have mastered the rare art of putting the right jewel in the right setting. There's a ring for every purse . . . a design for every taste. It's only natural, then, that today (as in the days of yesteryear) when the Match is made in Washington, the Ring comes from Schwartz . . . a Great Name in Jewelry in the Nation's Capital

Supply Agency in Grip Of Reducing Pains

By Jerry Kluttz

F"DERAL SUPPLY: This agency, formerly called the Procurement Division, is experiencing pains in reducing its force. People with 20 and 25 years of service are being fired, and offices are being virtually wiped out by the wide-scale shakedown now under way.

Kluttz

More than 1100 lay-off notices—about 600 of them here—are to become effective on June 30. The Treasury agency had 3400 employes early this year. On July 1, a staff of only 1500 will remain. The lay-offs are due to the wind-up of the Lend-Lease and UNRRA purchasing programs, and the decline in buying by Government in general.

However, there is an encouraging note in all this. Supply officials definitely promise to withdraw some of the 30-day notices which have been given to career employes. Furthermore, the agency is a safe bet to do the purchasing for the Greek and Turkish aid programs which will take a minimum of several hundred people.

P & MA: This big Agriculture agency, Production & Marketing Administration, is having its shakedown pains, too. Like Federal Supply, it has out dismissal notices to many of its long-service career people. In fact, the record shows that 6400 of its 13,800 employes were given 30-day notices and 1700 of those are in this city. However, about 100 have been withdrawn and quite a few others—a total of 2400—can be canceled under its budget as approved by the House.

But the agency has another complication—it's running out of money. To save funds, it has been proposed that at least 2000 people whose jobs appear to be hopelessly lost be put on forced leave a week from today. These people already have 30-day notices, and they were told that the 30 days was to be on the job. Also, the agency faces the clear possibility at reassigning at lower grades a good many of the employes who will remain.

The lack of funds may prevent the agency from withdrawing dismissal notices as soon as it would like to. . . . P. & M. A. officials now estimate that 4000 "man-years" must be cut out under the House bill. The agency is forced to have a number of extra seasonal people during the summer and fall months to grade cotton, tobacco, fruits, vegetables and the like . . . another complicating factor.

PATENT OFFICE is one of the few Federal agencies that's expanding. It will take on about 100 people here this month, and it plans to add 50 each month of July, August and September, and about 50 during each of the next three quarters.

WAR: Three of its top scientists have left the department—and the arbitrary Royall plan to fire and downgrade was said to have been a contributory cause in the decision of each to leave.

The trio is T. H. Johnson, a physicist at the Aberdeen (Md.) Proving Ground; Ralph Johnson, an electrical engineer with the Air Forces, and Philip Sartwell, who quit the Army Medical Center here to join the research staff at Johns Hopkins.

Incidentally, it's reported that war has called off all plans to downgrade and fire its scientists and technical people. But the damage has been done as few top-notch people will have any confidence in War's flip-flop personnel policies.

STATE: Its officials now say that very few new people will be needed in this department to handle State's work in the Greek-Turkish aid programs. The staff isn't expected to exceed 100 and it will be composed largely of people who are either borrowed from other agencies like Commerce and Agriculture, or who face dismissal at State for economy reasons.

TRAVELERS: The Senate Expenditures Committee has approved the Aiken bill to increase the per diem for Federal people who must travel on official business from $6 to a maximum of $8 . . . . CIVIL SERVICE: Chairman Wiley of the Senate Judiciary Committee has demanded that Civil Service select the 200 hearing examiners required under the Administrative Procedure Act by open and free competitive tests. He's a bit suspicious of the views of some of the present examiners.

BAE: The Bureau of Agricultural Economics has out 30-day lay-off notices to 111 employes, of whom 87 are in this city. A number of career people with more than 10 years of service are in the group.

The employes who had leave to carry them through June were ordered to take forced vacations immediately. In other words, they weren't given any on-the-job notice of dismissal, which is a shame. But the agency can't be blamed altogether as it doesn't have enough money to carry it through June 30. Short payless vacations are now planned for a group of middle and high bracket professional people.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES: An exam for metallurgists will be announced soon. Starting salaries are from $3397 to $5905 . . . About 2500 applied for the laboratory mechanic test . . . An election will be held tomorrow to name an employe member on the commission board of review. Candidates are: Gertrude Kinsley, Bob Reynolds, Mahlon Ward and William Yearwood . . . Civil Service reminds employes to name a beneficiary to their retirement account.

Mellon Fund Gifts Total 76 Millions In 15 Years

Report Shows Bulk Of Philanthropic Trust Was Invested In National Gallery

Nearly 76 million dollars in cash and works of art were contributed to local and national institutions by the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust during its first 15 years.

Most of this amount—71 million dollars—represents the building, endowment and works of art of the National Gallery of Art here. The gallery was given to the Nation by the late Andrew W. Mellon through the trust. This is the largest gift ever made by an individual to the United States Government.

A report of the trust, to be distributed today, shows that other Washington institutions benefited by gifts of $368,850 during the period from December 30, 1930, when Mr. Mellon created the fund, to December 31, 1945. The largest of such local gifts went to the Community Chest and the Corcoran Gallery.

The trustees, Paul Mellon and Mrs. Ailsa Mellon Bruce, children of the former Secretary of the Treasury, and Donald D. Shepard of Washington, longtime associate of Mr. Mellon, plan to distribute the entire remainder of the fund within the next 15 years. At the end of 1946, its book value was $32,416,459, but the market value was substantially higher, the report states.

The total of all contributions in the 15-year period covered by the report amounted to $75,956,305, and additional gifts of $2,313,981 were made during 1946.

Mr. Mellon began to give property and securities to the trust in 1930. In 1931 he made his first gift of paintings, and later all the works he had gathered became part of the internationally famous collection of the National Gallery.

The book cost of the Mellon collection was $32,490,155, but at the time of the gift, it was valued by congressional committees at about 50 million dollars.

The building housing the gallery, dedicated in 1941 and accepted by President Roosevelt cost $16,057,433. In 1942, the trust established a 5 million dollar endowment for the gallery, which, as expressly stipulated by the donor, does not bear his name.

Mr. Mellon's hope that other donors would contribute to a great national collection, has been realized, and the gallery now houses more than 16,000 works of art.

In addition to its major project and to the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research in Pittsburgh, previously generously endowed, the trust has made a wide variety of charitable grants, totaling $4,898,872.

Among these have been the following, made to institutions and agencies here in Washington:

In the field of social welfare: American Red Cross, D. C. Chapter, $52,250; Boys' Club of Washington, $10,000; Boys' Club of Metropolitan Police, $850; Community Chest, Washington, $122,000; Central Union Mission, $3600; Child Welfare League of America, $100; unemployment relief in D. C., $9050; Washington Home for Foundlings, $50,000.

In education: American University, $5000; National Symphony Orchestra, $4500; Corcoran Gallery of Art, $65,000.

For health: Gallinger Hospital, cancer research, $1500.

For religion: Washington Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation, $9000.

For war relief: USO Special Committee, Washington, $7500; United War Fund, Washington, $28,500.

Bryan to Take Oath as Judge Tomorrow

Albert V. Bryan, former Commonwealth's attorney in Alexandria, will be formally sworn in as judge of the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia tomorrow at 11 a. m. in the Federal courtroom at Alexandria.

Judge William P. Woolls of Alexandria's Corporation Court has been delegated to administer the oath of office. A presidential commission, appointing Judge Bryan as successor to Judge Robert N. Pollard, will be presented by Carroll K. Moran, clerk of the Federal Court.

Judge Bryan was nominated for the post by President Truman after eight bar associations in the northern Virginia area indorsed his appointment following an announcement by Judge Pollard that he would retire on April 2. The nomination was unanimously approved by the Senate last week.

Under State law, Judge Bryan's successor as Commonwealth's attorney will be appointed by Judge Woolls. Petitions already have been circulated urging appointment of Howard W. Smith, jr., son of Representative Howard Smith and assistant to Bryan at the time of his appointment to the Federal judgeship.

City News in Brief

3-Ft. Snake Fails to Tilt Man's Eyelid

It would excite most persons, but Thomas Fitzgibbons didn't even lift an eyelid when a 3-foot snake wriggled off the rear roof of his house at 1831 Belmont st. nw. yesterday.

Fitzgibbons, who was reading his newspaper on the rear porch, calmly watched the snake glide away. However, less complacent neighbors called police, who captured the reptile and took it to the Zoo. It was a king snake, harmless and very handy at devouring insects.

Safe Broken Open

A safe containing the uncounted weekend's receipts of the Kilsheimer Slaughter House, 1900 Bladensburg rd. ne., was broken open sometime early yesterday morning, Bernard Kilsheimer, coowner of the establishment told police. He said the intruders forced a front door.

Hot Coffee a Weapon

Alvin F. Henderson, 34, Wilmington, Del., was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon yesterday after throwing a pot of hot coffee in the face of Leon E. Daniels, 23, also of Wilmington. The skirmish occurred early yesterday aboard the S. S. Mount Vernon, where both men are employed as waiters.

Daniels was admitted to Emergency Hospital with second degree burns on his head and face.

In Maryland and Virginia

Two Spotted Fever Cases From Va. in D. C. Hospital

Two probable cases of spotted fever were reported yesterday by Children's Hospital officials.

The cases are those of two Marshall, Va., children admitted to the hospital Saturday night suffering from what was first believed to be chickenpox.

Hospital attaches said yesterday several tests indicated the children, one 5 and one 7, were suffering from spotted fever. Although other tests will not be completed before noon today, the "clinical diagnosis" already has been established as spotted fever.

Last month, a 70-year-old District resident died of spotted fever.

Civic Dinner Slated

Brooke Johns, president of the Board of Montgomery County Commissioners, will address the annual banquet of the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring Thursday at 7 p. m. in the Silver Spring Grill.

Pig Bank Has $2000

Members of the Park View Christian (Disciples of Christ) Church yesterday opened a "pig bank" containing $2000 at Blair Park Auditorium, Georgia and Eastern aves., Silver Spring. The money will be added to a fund to build a new church at 12th st. and Eastern ave. nw.

Bazaar Aids Memorial

Funds to erect a monument in honor of World War II heroes to replace the present honor roll at Landover Hills, Md., are to be raised at a bazaar to be held at 7 tonight by the Landover Hills Women's Club.

The bazaar will be held at Defense hwy. and Buchanan st., Landover Hills. The monument will have a bronze tablet with the names inscribed, according to Mrs. Ann E. McEntee, president.

Plenty of Contests

A total of 56 candidates have filed for election to the 33-member Arlington County Democratic Committee, Chairman J. Maynard Magruder disclosed yesterday. Three representatives will be chosen in the August 5 primary from each of the county's 11 voting precincts. Contests are slated in every precinct except Clarendon No. 1, where Lawrence Manning, William King and Mrs. H. J. Odenphal are unopposed.

Cherry Crop Short

Cherry pies may have to be reduced to tart size in Virginia this year. Frederick County Agent I. Fred Stine reported yesterday that the sour cherry crop will be "very short" due to recent freezes. Lovers of strawberry shortcake will be affected, too. The berry crop is small, too, he said.

Art Contest Opens

Bethesda Kiwanis Club is sponsoring an art contest for students of junior and senior high schools or junior colleges in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area.

Prizes will be artists' supplies, with a scholarship to be presented to the outstanding contestant of all age groups. Pictures submitted will be displayed in Bethesda store windows. Information and applications may be obtained from the office of Samuel E. Bogley, 7004 Wisconsin ave.

Chimes Dedicated

New chimes on the Landis Memorial organ were dedicated at St. Luke Lutheran Church, Colesville rd. and Highland dr., Silver Spring, yesterday, and first services were held in the new edifice of District Heights, (Md.) Presbyterian Church.

Election Judges Named

Mayor Fenner S. Hazelgrove of Falls Church yesterday appointed Councilman Harry McCarthy and Sargent White as judges for tomorrow's election to choose three members of the six-man council. The only contest is in the First Ward, where Councilman Sherman Wells is opposed by Theodore Arrants.

Archie Munson is unopposed for reelection from the Second Ward and J. C. McRae is sole candidate to succeed Councilman White, who declined to run again.

Wolcott to Speak

Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.) chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, will address a meeting of the Montgomery County Republican Club at 8 p. m. tomorrow at Masonic Temple, Silver Spring.

Loyalty Bill Debate Aired Over WINX

Rep. Rees Argues It Would Protect U. S. Government From the Disloyal

Representative Edward H. Rees (R., Kans.) and Samuel H. Jaffee, 4816 45th st. nw., continued over WINX yesterday a debate begun at Saturday's hearing of the House Civil Service Committee.

The Federal employe loyalty bill, sponsored by Rees, who is chairman of the committee, was outlined by him on the air as a contribution to the Government's security through removal of those on the payroll who may be disloyal, and by keeping out similar applicants.

Jaffee, who at the hearing had represented the American Jewish Congress, said yesterday the measure would, under "its vague standards and inadequate procedure, cut down the innocent as well as the guilty."

Rees said the cost of enforcing the law would be less than the 25 million dollars estimated for the President's loyalty order, which is less comprehensive. As for the extra work of investigation by the FBI, Rees said it would be adequately covered by an appropriation.

Rees agreed with Jaffee that the list of disloyal organizations, which would be compiled by the Attorney General under the bill, should be made public. To Jaffee's contention that the bill would create a "police state," the sponsor replied it would apply only to Federal employes.

The discussion was on the regular forum, "Is Congress Doing Its Job?"

Eisler to Go On Stand in Own Defense

Jury May Get Case Of Mystery Red Today; 16 Others Face Contempt Trial

Gerhart Eisler, mystery man of international communism, will take the stand in District Court today to defend himself against the charge of contempt of Congress.

The Government is hopeful that the case against Eisler can go to the jury today.

Completion of the Eisler trial will clear the way for the trial of Howard Fast, prominent novelist, and 15 associates, also on charges of contempt of Congress.

This mass trial was scheduled to begin today before Justice Alexander Holtzoff but he is still busy with the Eisler case.

Faces Three Other Counts

Eisler, said by the FBI to have operated as liaison man between Moscow and the Communist Party in this country, is charged with contempt in refusing to testify before the House Un-American activities Committee last February 6.

On the contempt charge, he faces a maximum penalty of one year and a fine of $1000. Defense counsel includes David Rein, Washington attorney. William Hitz is the Government prosecutor.

The 51-year-old German Communist has also been indicted on three counts of passport fraud for which he will be tried next Monday.

Fast and the 15 others are officials of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee.

Dr. Edward K. Barsky, chairman of the committee; Jacob Auslander, Lyman R. Bradley, Marjorie Chodorov, Leverett Gleason, Harry M. Justis, Samuel Kamsley, Ruth Leider, Samuel Magana, Louis Miller, Herman Shumlin, Charlotte Stern, Jesse Tolmach and Mrs. Bobbie Weinstein, all of New York City, and James Lustig of Newark, N. J.

Charged With Conspiracy

The 16 are charged with criminal conspiracy to prevent the House Committee on Un-American Activities from gaining access to pertinent records of the refugee committee, and also with defaulting on a subpena ordering them to produce the records.

A seventeenth person, similarly indicted, is Ernestina G. Fleischman. She has not yet been apprehended.

Miss Helen R. Bryan, secretary of the refugee committee, who was indicted on only one charge, that of defaulting on a subpena to produce the records, will be tried in District Court later.

Rabies Vaccinations Scheduled Tonight

Rabies vaccinations for dogs in Prince Georges County today are scheduled as follows:

Wildercroft School, 6 to 7 p. m.; Riverdale Heights Volunteer Fire Department, 7:15 to 8 p. m.; Capitol Heights School, 6 to 7:30 p. m.; Ager Road Elementary School, 6 to 7:30 p. m., and Forestville School, 6 to 7:30 p. m.

Bloom Breaks Ground

Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.) turned the first spadeful of earth yesterday as ground was broken for the $80,000 Arlington Jewish Center at Lee blvd. and S. Fenwick st. The ceremony was attended by civic and religious figures of various faiths.

An auditorium and other facilities of the new center will be ready this fall. A synagogue is to be built later.

Drug Store Robber

Wrist watches, fountain pens and cigarette lighters were taken from the Sanitary Drug Store, 215 New York ave. nw., sometime early yesterday by thieves who broke two padlocks on a rear door. Paul Levinson, store owner, said he could not estimate his loss until he took an inventory.

Taffy Emulates Circus Elephants

Educated Taffy pulled down all the honors at the John Nevins Andrews School pet show yesterday.

A 15-months-old cocker spaniel, Taffy displayed to advantage what he had learned from his young teacher, Joylyn Jennings, 10, of 11121 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Spring, Md.

Fee Increase Plan Set for Hearing Today

District residents today will tell the Commissioners what they think of a proposal to hike license fees for 15 types of District business professions.

A public hearing will begin at 10 a. m. in the District Building board room. Among license increases proposed are a hike from $15 to $25 per year for restaurants, from $30 to $75 for motion picture theaters, from $8 to $30 for public halls; from $5 to $15 for grocery stores and from $50 to $450 for theaters with movable scenery.

The hearing is being held under Commissioners' authority to raise or lower license fees "as the cost of inspection, supervision or regulation is raised or lowered."

Types of business affected include apothecaries, auctioneers, public baths, commission merchants, groceries, public halls, marine products (wholesale dealers), massage establishments, motion picture theaters, restaurants, shooting galleries, swimming pools, theaters with movable scenery, circuses and carnivals.

Blood Asked For Victim of Hit-Run Taxi

An appeal for blood donors was issued yesterday for a 79-year-old retired policeman who was struck down late Saturday night by a hit-and-run cab driver.

The traffic victim was Edwin M. Jett of 1434 W st. se., who was struck by the cab about 11:30 p. m. Saturday while walking across the street at Nichols ave. and W st. se.

Police issued a call for blood donors when the hospital informed them Jett needed a transfusion of Type 2 blood.

Jett was attached to the Eleventh Precinct before his retirement. Police have been unable to locate any of his relatives.

Meantime, four persons were injured, one seriously, in a head-on collision on rainswept Route 240, 3 miles of Rockville early last night. Both cars were demolished.

Seriously injured was Miss Ilene Springer, 24, 4602 5th st. nw., who was admitted to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, with possible fractures of both legs. Her condition was reported to be fair.

John Ray, 32, Brookville, Md., said by Montgomery County police to be the driver of the car in which Miss Springer was riding, and Neil Osbourne, 16, 3823 S. 16th st., Arlington, another passenger, were admitted to the hospital for treatment of head lacerations.

Eugene Culberson, 1307 Delafield pl. nw., an ex-sailor, whose birthday is today, the driver of the other car, was admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital with head lacerations.

Police said no charges were placed against either driver.

Officers to Be Elected

Officers will be elected by the newly organized Northwest Bethesda Citizens Association at 8 p. m. Wednesday at Bethesda Elementary School.

D. C. Traffic Death Tally Drops to 9 During May

Injuries Show Gain Over April; 1947 Still Leads Last Year in Fatalities

Nine persons died from traffic accidents in the Washington Metropolitan area last month, compared to April's toll of 11 deaths.

The number of traffic injuries in May, however, totaled 568 for the area, or 67 more persons hurt than durnig the month preceding.

Despite the decline in fatalities, comparison of the total killed during the first five months of this year showed that 1947 still holds the lead, with a total of 63 traffic deaths, compared to 51 dead during the similar period of 1946.

The records also disclose that up to June 1 of this year there were 2191 persons hurt in traffic accidents in the District and its surrounding counties, an increase of four over the first five-month toll of last year.

Four Dead in May

In the District, alone, four persons died from traffic accidents last month and 422 were injured in the 996 recorded accidents. April's toll was six dead, 408 injured and 911 accidents. In May of last year, there were six deaths, 465 injuries and 1030 accidents.

The year's total of 30 traffic deaths by June 1 in the District of Columbia is seven greater than last year's five-month toll.

Montgomery County, Md., even with the deaths of three passengers in a bus struck by a freight train in Bethesda, May 14, bettered its fatality records of May, 1946, when four traffic deaths were listed. The county had no other traffic fatalities for last month, but registered 57 persons injured in 96 accidents.

One traffic death in Prince Georges County last month marred a record otherwise favorable in comparison with May, 1946. There were 16 fewer accidents and eight less persons hurt this May than last.

Arlington Toll Decreases

Arlington County, with one traffic fatality in May and none in April, showed a drop of seven in the number of traffic accidents last month over the preceding month. The county had seven persons hurt in each of the two months.

For the third month in a row, Alexandria traffic figures showed a zero in the fatalities column. And though in May the number of traffic accidents reached 71, in contrast to April's 55, the number of persons hurt last month in the Virginia city was one less than the preceding month's toll of 22 injured.

No deaths from traffic causes in Fairfax County last month kept the county's fatality toll for the year to three, in sharp contrast to 12 recorded deaths there for the first five months of last year. However, May's tally of 17 persons injured contrasts with only three traffic injuries in April, though the actual number of accidents was 24 in May and 17 in April.

Shrine Dedicated With Outdoor Rites

Rain Forces One Church Event Indoors, Postpones Two Others on 'Children's Day'

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Threatening rain held off long enough yesterday for the new National Enthronement of the Sacred Heart to be dedicated in outdoor rites at the Fathers of the Sacred Hearts Seminary.

However, the weather forced another local religious event indoors and caused postponement of two others scheduled for the open air.

Many Sunday schools and churches in the District observed "Children's Day" yesterday, while Methodists held their annual "Student Day" competition.

Opens With Procession

At the Fathers of the Sacred Hearts Seminary, 4930 South Dakota ave. ne., the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, blessed the Shrine and Statue of the Sacred Heart and later gave the Apostolic Blessing to the throng.

The Shrine ceremonies opened with a procession led by Sacred Hearts Seminarians, with the Christian Brothers Choir of De La Salle College, Brookland, singing. Formally-dressed Fourth Degree Knights of Columbia participated.

Joseph J. Ellicott, acting superintendent of the Chicago Bureau of Water, donated the Shrine in memory of his wife, Gladys. He and his four sisters, who are nuns, attended. The Shrine is stone and stands 13 feet high. The 6-foot, 7-inch State of the Sacred Heart is a replica of the famed statute of Montmarte, Paris. The Very Rev. Alphonse J. Bertman, of St. Aloysius' Church, Springfield, Ill., preached the sermon at the dedication.

Other religious events in the District yesterday included these:

The Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, formerly rector of Georgetown University, addressed a communion breakfast of the James Cardinal Gibbons Post, Catholic War Veterans, in Holy Trinity Hall, 36th and O sts. nw., after a communion mass in the church. Father O'Leary is now a Holy Trinity pastor.

Five children were promoted from the primary to the junior department in Children's Day graduation exercises at the Universalist National Memorial Church, 16th and S sts. nw. Receiving diplomas were Cecile Boggs, Marjorie Dittman, Sandra Topping, Shirley Wiley and Susan McCain. The program was held in the church, instead of the garden, because of the weather.

Babies Dedicated

The following babies from the Cradle Roll Department of Petworth Baptist Church, 7th and Randolph sts. nw., were dedicated to Christian service yesterday.

Leaders of Albright Memorial Evangelican Church, 4th and Rittenhouse sts. nw., announced postponement until June 15 at 6:30 p. m. of their Camp Schaarfwood project near Rockville. Postponed until fall was the community open-air service which Takoma Lutheran Church planned for last night at 13th st. and Eastern ave. nw., site of the congregation's proposed new building.

Priory Graduation

LaRoe Warns That Freedom Is Imperiled

Wilbur LaRoe, jr., said yesterday that "the greatest danger confronting the world today is the threat to human freedom."

"Totalitarianism in its several forms is engulfing millions, Hungary being its latest victim," said LaRoe, new Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. He spoke at the morning services at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, where he is an elder.

In his first public address here since his elevation to the highest Presbyterian post, LaRoe declared:

"It serves no useful purpose to plan for world peace if it is to be the type of peace in which men are enslaved. The Negroes had peace before the Civil War, but it was peace at an awful price. It makes no difference from a Christian viewpoint whether the totalitarian government is of the Communist type or the Fascist type, the important point being that in both types the government is the master and not the servant of the people.

"In our own hemisphere there are Fascist governments in Argentina and Santo Domingo, while in Europe totalitarianism is gaining at such a rate as to force our statesmen to think in terms of defensive strategy. The situation is sufficiently serious as to imperil, at least for the present, the whole program of United Nations. There can be no hope of world brotherhood if half of the world is free and the other half in slavery. Neither a nation nor a world can endure half slave and half free."

Pleads for Unity

A plea for unity of Protestant bodies came from Dr. Reuben Mueller, speaking at services marking the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, 4th and Rittenhouse sts. nw.

Dr. Muller of Dayton, Ohio, executive secretary of the Evangelical Board of Christian Education, cited the recent merger of the Evangelical and United Brethren bodies as being "the only church merger in the United States achieved without loss of a pastor or congregation because of dissatisfaction."

Presiding at the anniversary services was Dr. George E. Schanbel, who has been the only pastor of Albright Church since inception, June 8, 1926, with services under a tent on the present site.

New Pastor Installed

More than 800 worshipers attended services installing Dr. Graham Gordon Lacy as pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, 16th and Irving sts. nw. A Navy chaplain in World War II, he is the fourth pastor in the 79-year history of the church.

Dr. Donald Miller, professor of English Bible at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, preached the sermon. Dr. James H. Taylor of Charleston, S. C., pastor-emeritus of Central Church, gave the charge to the congregation at the induction rites.

In his sermon, Dr. Miller made a plea for discovering Christ through following His teachings in everyday experiences of life.

Parade, Initiation Set for Tonight By Almas Temple

Almas Temple Nobles of the Mystic Shrine will initiate 125 candidates at their annual spring ceremonial tonight at the Statler Hotel.

Illustrious Potentate Ralph M. Wolfe and his Divan will lead a parade of uniformed units and the Shriners-elect from Almas Temple, 1315 K st. nw., to the hotel, starting at 7:30.

Wolfe has invited potentates and divans from 16 surrounding temples to attend the ceremonies which start at 8 p. m. with the first section. The second section team will be put through its paces at 9:30.

James I. O'Neal

James I. O'Neal, 65, a retired Safeway Stores employe, died yesterday in Garfield Hospital.

Mr. O'Neal, who was born in Carlinville, Ill., came to the Washington area in 1918 and had lived at 214 Williamsburg dr., Silver Spring, for the past 12 years.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nellie Hall O'Neal; a daughter, Mrs. Helen Bell, and two grandchildren, Roland and Wayne Bell, all of Silver Spring.

A requiem mass will be said Wednesday at St. John's Catholic Church, Forest Glen, at 9 a. m.

Funeral of Earl W. Engleman, Optician, to Be Held Tomorrow

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. for Earl Winter Engleman, sr., an optician, who died Saturday at his home, 512 Tuckerman st. nw., after a two-year illness.

Services will be held at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial with Masonic and military honors will be at Arlington National Cemetery.

A native of Baltimore, Mr. Engleman attended schools there, moving to Washington 21 years ago. He was employed at the Edmonds Optical Co. for many years. He had been connected with the Mayflower Optical Co., 908 17th st. nw., for the past 10 years.

Mr. Engleman was a past master of Brightwood Lodge No. 43, F. A. A. M., and a member of H. L. Edmonds Post No. 2460, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Masonic rites will be held in his honor at the lodge tomorrow at noon. Members of the VFW post will pay tribute tonight at 8:30 p. m. at the funeral home.

He was a World War I veteran, having served in combat with the Seventy-fourth Engineers in France.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Henrietta M. Engleman; two daughters, Misses Helen A. and Audry M. Engelman; a son, David T. Engleman, all of the Tuckerman st. address, and another son, Earl W. Engleman, jr., of 313 Garland ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Mrs. Helen Cardozo

Funeral services for Mrs. Helen B. Cardozo, 60, the widow of Dr. Francis J. Cardozo, will be held Wednesday at 10 a. m. in the Church of the Incarnation, 1012 Browning pl. ne. Burial will be in the Woodlawn Cemetery.

Dr. Cardozo came to Washington in 1885 and in that year he was made an instructor of eighth grade subjects in the District school system. When he retired in 1935, he was the principal of Phillips Elementary School. Dr. Cardozo died January 23, 1945.

A native of the District, Mrs. Cardozo died Saturday night at her home, 602 59th ave., Fairmount, Md.

She is survived by her son, Donald F. Cardozo, and two sisters, Mrs. Rosa B. Lacy and Miss Rachel Bell of Washington.

Edmund Windsor

Funeral services for Edmund Windsor, 46, Takoma Park house painter who shot and seriously wounded his wife Saturday and then fatally wounded himself, will be held today.

Services will be at 1 p. m. at the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, Silver Spring, Md. Burial will be in Epiphany Episcopal Church Cemetery at Forestville, Md.

Windsor shot his estranged wife as she left their home at 8857 Piney Branch rd. to go to the Takoma Decorating Co., where she is a clerk. He then turned the .22-caliber rifle on himself. He died three hours later at Washington Sanitarium Hospital where the wife was reported in "good" condition. She was shot in the throat, the bullet emerging through the upper lip.

Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, certified Windsor's death a suicide.

H. C. Baldridge

Boise, Idaho, June 8 (AP).—H. Clarence Baldridge, 78, former Governor of Idaho and a resident of the State since 1904, died in his sleep last night.

Col. Shields Warren

Funeral services will be held for Col. Shields Warren, U. S. A., retired, tomorrow at 3 p. m. in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Colonel Warren died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital after a long illness.

Born in Texas and raised in Appalachicola, Fla., he began his military career with the Florida National Guard during the Mexican border incident. During World War I be served in France with the First Division. He received his Regular Army commission in 1920. He retired in 1941, but was recalled to active duty shortly after Pearl Harbor.

Colonel Warren was a graudate of the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., and the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Vera Johnston Warren, Appalachicola, Fla.; a son, Lieut. Col. Shields Warren, jr., Fort Benning, Ga.; a daughter, Mrs. Elmer W. Gude, Mitchel Field, N. Y., and five grandsons.

Miss Margaret Fitzgibbons

Miss Margaret Fitzgibbons, 74, a dressmaker here for more than 50 years, died at 4:10 p. m. Saturday at Little Sisters Home, 220 H st. ne.

She had worked as a dressmaker for many of Washington's prominent families.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Annie Freeburger of Washington, and several nieces and nephews. She was a member of the Catholic Church.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. Wednesday at St. Francis de Sales Church, Rhode Island ave. and 20th st. ne., burial following in Holy Rood Cemetery, 2126 Wisconsin ave. nw. The body is at Timothy Hanlon funeral home, 6 H. st. ne.

Catholic, Georgetown Classes Hear Baccalaureate Sermons

Catholic University students were called upon yesterday, in a baccalaureate sermon, to be "defenders of the positive values in human life."

In similar services at Georgetown University, graduating students were urged to set "unswervingly good examples" to their fellow men and to pursue an "intense practice of their religion."

Speaking in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, the Rev. Dr. Edmond D. Benard of Catholic University's School of Theology declared that "we must love God . . . with our intellect as well as with our heart and soul."

Declaring that "we live in an age of educational anarchy, he asserted:

"The great divorce, between learning and sanctity, between knowledge of God's creation and love of its Creator, is almost complete."

The Rev. Frederick C. Hickey, O.P., head of the chemistry department of Providence (R. I.) College, cautioned Georgetown University students assembled in Dahlgren Chapel that a life devoted to pleasure fails to bring "inner peace and tranquility."

Only when man seeks for the "good and true" and sublimates his "lower faculties," Father Hickey said, can he find "true peace in his soul."

God, he said, has "trained you to be leaders of men—you should lead them to God and not away from him." He also urged the students to "weigh very carefully all sources of information" and then "make up your own minds" without regard to "popularity or convenience."

Today, at 5 p. m. on the university lawn, 600 Georgetown University students will receive degrees and hear a commencement address by William C. Bullitt, former U. S. Ambassador to Russia and France. Some 700 students will receive degrees from Catholic University Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. in the university gymnasium.

The Most Rev. Amleto Cicognani, apostolic delegate, presented diplomas to 16 graduates yesterday in services at Priory School, 14th st. and S. Dakota ave. ne.

In the main address, the Right Rev. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's Cathedral, held out as a guiding principle the title of a work by the late Dr. George Johnson of Catholic University—"Better Men, Better Times."

"Times just don't happen," he said. "They are made by men. If we want better times, spiritually, economically and morally, we must have better men."

The mass was celebrated by the Very Rev. D. Henry Alban Boultwood, O. S. B., prior of the order.

Debt-free Church

Brookland's Mortgage Is Burned

Members of Brookland Baptist Church, 16th and Monroe sts. ne., last night burned the $115,000 mortgage on their Sunday School building.

Clearing of the Sunday School obligation left the congregation debt-free. Construction on the $250,000 Sunday School plant began in 1928. The building is recognized as one of the most complete units of its kind in Washington.

The Rev. Ward B. Hurlburt, new pastor of Brookland Church, led the mortgage-burning ceremonies. Former pastors participating were Dr. O. O. Dietz, pastor when the present building was planned and built; Dr. M. Chandler Stith, now executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist Convention, and pastor when most of the debt was liquidated; Dr. Gaye L. McGlothlen, now of the Baptist Sunday School Board, and Dr. Charles Green, interim pastor until Mr. Hurlburt was called. Dr. Green is a resident physician at Children's Hospital and plans to become a medical missionary.

Also taking part were J. L. Sherwood, 85, oldest member of the congregation, and E. L. Carleton, chairman of the board of trustees.

During depression days, most of the payments on the debt went for interest. During the last 6 years the principal has been whittled down rapidly, the last payment being made May 1, 1947.

Laborer's Death By Electrocution Held an Accident

A certificate of accidental death was issued yesterday in the death of Jesse M. Lee, 32, laborer, who was electrocuted Saturday when a crane arced power from a high-tension wire at Bradbury Heights, Md.

The certificate was issued by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, after Prince Georges County police investigated.

Lee was holding a wire attached to the crane when the boom of the crane neared the high-tension line. Witnesses said the 6000 volts in the line jumped to the crane with the crane coming into contact with it.

Greek General Dies

Athens, June 8 (AP).—Nicholas Trepeklis, retired general, died here today after he collapsed while lecturing at the Parnassus Literary Club before an audience which included Queen Frederika and the Duchess of Kent.

D. C. Navy Airman Survives Crash Of Plane at Sea

A Washington youth of 26, who survived the crackup at sea of a Navy torpedo bomber, was recuperating from exposure yesterday at the Charleston, S. C., Naval Hospital.

He is Aviation Machinist's Mate Curtis Prior, whose local address was not immediately available. According to the Associated Press, his condition was improving.

Prior was one of two survivors of a three-man crew. The other, Lieut. (j. g.) Irving W. Kinder, 26, of Calhoun County, Ill., said he and Prior spent seven hours in the water supported by life jackets after the bomber crashed off Savannah. The plane was en route from Jacksonville, Fla., to Cherry Point, N. C.

The men were spotted from the air and picked up by a patrol boat from a Coast Guard base. Prior was carried from the boat to a waiting ambulance at Charleston.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Trying to Assuage Husband's Rampant Jealousy, Wife Resigns From All Civic, Social and Church Groups; Still He Distrusts Her; She Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I are married 13 years, have two wonderful children and every reason to be the happiest couple in the world, but we are both miserable because he is obsessed with the crazy notion that I am unfaithful to him.

I don't know where he gets such crazy ideas, as I haven't looked at another man since we married. In fact, I have given up all the offices I once held in various civic, fraternal and church groups and refuse to serve on any committees, so that I can devote all my time and energy to him and the children, to reassure him.

I believe I am a good wife in every respect. I am a good housekeeper, an excellent cook, do my own work and help him with his business. Yet he accuses me of misbehavior with dozens of men, including his best friends, and when I deny these fantastic charges he calls me a liar and other names which hurt unbearably.

Doctor Sees Little Wrong

GOD KNOWS I'm not guilty of these charges and I get so discouraged I cry for days, which is bad for all of us. My husband says if I'm not guilty I should be able to laugh it off. It's pretty difficult to laugh things off when you have a jealous husband who honestly thinks you're unfaithful to him, and who has a sharp evil tongue which he uses without restraint.

He won't tell me why he thinks I'm unfaithful. He only says he knows it. Last year I went to our doctor with the idea of having him refer us to a good psychiatrist and make the appointment; but after the doctor talked with us separately he said we didn't need a psychiatrist's help.

Now my husband flatly refuses to join me in consulting a specialist to get to the root of his worry and iron it out. He says he's all right; there's nothing wrong with him. He works very hard and loses lots of sleep, due to the nature of his business. Could this be the reason why his imagination runs away with him?

I would do anything to hold his love and have a happy marriage and harmonious home; but it looks as if he wants to believe I am doing wrong. I can't hope to make him think differently now; but how can I bear up in the situation? I am growing bitter and resentful because of it. How can I overcome this? Please help me. E. B.

Man Doesn't Know What Worries Him

DEAR E. B.: You've called for help, but in reply I must speak to your husband. That's the only way I can begin to help solve the problem. I want him to read this.

His suffering is causing yours; hence the sensible approach is to clear up his frantic anxiety first, by helping him get a look at what's really bothering him—like turning on light in a dark room, where threatening forces are thought to be moving.

Okay, sir? Your problem is this: You are and always have been a terrifically sensitive person, introspective, highly imaginative, with feelings very easily hurt. And because this is a pretty rough world, your sensitivity has taken quite a beating through the years.

Lives in Fear Of 'the Worst'

AS A result, you are burdened with a tremendous sense of inferiority, a condition which existed long before you met your wife. Consequently it is almost impossible for you to believe that a woman could love you truly and reject all other men for you.

Moreover, it's a lifetime ingrained habit with you to be chronically apprehensive of "the worst," —whatever that might be in a given circumstance from your viewpoint. You are always afraid something terrible is going to happen to disgrace you or destroy your security—your love security, family security, money security, etc.

In marriage, of course, "the worst" that can happen, usually, is to lose one's partner, either by death or infidelity. Now take your case: You love your wife, lean heavily on her for help, need her devotion desperately. Yet as already said, you have a terrible sense of inferiority; you are a chronically anxious fellow, always fearing the worst.

Doctor Missed Crux of Problem

SO, for neurotic reasons, you live in fear of losing your wife. This fear comes creeping up from your subconscious mind, along with an overflow of inferiority feelings, to poison all your thinking about her. And that's the whole trouble. Emotionally you are sick—and projecting your sick imaginings at her, like a man with a fever.

The doctor who advised against psychiatric treatment a year ago didn't know what he was talking about. Maybe he didn't get the whole story. Maybe you sold him a bill of goods that sounded plausible and threw him off. In any event, he completely missed the crux of the problem. Psychiatric help is precisely what you need.

There are numerous good specialists in your area; and for first-hand help in picking the best, turn to the superintendent of the State hospital near you—a fine man, I'm told. In conclusion, my advice is: Tackle that neurosis, determined to cure it. Trust your wife—believe in her and let her guide you—and learn how to be happy, with so much to live for! M. H.

The Picnic Table Cloth

One housewife whose family loves to picnic made a tablecloth especially for these occasions but of inexpensive material with a pocket in each corner. Then spreading the cloth on the picnic table a stone is put in each pocket, thus holding the cloth firm in the wind. It even works if the cloth is spread directly on the ground.

WAABI Unit Plans Dinner Tuesday Night

Mrs. Helen G. Sprackling, author and national director of the Women's Association of Allied Beverage Industries, and Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, member of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board, will be honor guest at the installation dinner of the Washington Chapter of the WAABI to be held tomorrow, 7 p. m., in the Statler Hotel.

Other guests will include Miss Alberta Madigan, national secretary of the organization; Miss Anne Davidge, special assistant to District Commissioner Guy Mason, and Miss Dorothy Barnitz, president of the Baltimore Chapter.

Officers to be installed for two-year terms in the recently established chapter are: Mrs. Freda Ezersky, president; Mrs. Helen Millman, first vice president; Miss Rita Christy, second vice president; Mrs. Claire Weltman, corresponding secretary; Miss Viola Allen, recording secretary; Miss Ida Kushner, treasurer, and Mrs. Helen Rabenovets, assistant treasurer. Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell is public relations officer.

Chairman of the dinner committee is Mrs. Hilda Mason. Mrs. Estelle Diamond and Mrs. Ethel Gordon are assisting Mrs. Mason.

The purpose of the WAABI is to promote friendship, to sponsor charitable activities and to encourage support of both the spirit and the letter of the alcoholic beverage control act and regulations. Membership is limited to women who are active in establishments licensed under the alcoholic beverage control act to sell alcoholic beverages.

The local chapter was organized in March of this year with temporary officers appointed by Mrs. Sprackling. Mrs. Selma Edlavitch has been acting as chairman on the temporary basis.

North Dakota State Society To Elect Officers, Dance

The North Dakota State Society will hold its final dance of the season tonight at the Bannockburn Country Club near Glen Echo. Preceding the dance, new officers will be elected. Miss Lucille H. Blake, society president, is in charge of arrangements.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

Our windows have 12 small panes and the paint on the wood separations in bedrooms and bath has cracked and is rough. Is there anything we can do to remedy this before repainting to prevent recurrences? We plan to sand and refinish our hardwood floors. Should we use the shellac process or wax? How does one straighten a rug runner that has a kink or fold in it? What does one do to use fresh coconut after shell is removed? Is it ground or grated? Mine molds and does not keep at all. What is mixed with it to bring out the flavor? D. H. W.

Before painting your window frames, smooth the rough paint by rubbing with sand paper and brush away all of the dust and loose particles. Use a good foundation paint and then a top coat which will dry to a hard finish. When the paint is well dried wax thoroughly. This will protect the paint and wood in the future.

It seems to be a matter of opinion which method is better, floors finished by shellac and then waxed, or floors which have been only waxed. Shellacing does give a high gloss, but it has a tendency to become scratched and wear off unless constantly protected by wax. When worn spots appear, the floor can rarely be patched without looking spotty. Wax brings out the beauty of the wood more than any other finish and has the advantage of making the wood more beautiful with age provided it is rewaxed when wax becomes worn. Worn spots on a waxed floor can be rewaxed without looking patchy.

A rug runner which has a kink or fold in it can be straightened by dampening the fold and placing a weight on it until thoroughly dry. For a large fold, a board wide enough to cover the fold, weighted by bricks works very well.

Coconut can be either ground or grated after removing from the shell. Grated coconut is more fluffy and so makes a pretttier decoration. Fresh coconut should be treated as the perishable food it is, refrigerated and used within a day or so. The coconut we buy in packages keeps indefinitely because it has been dried and has sugar added. That is why it has more flavor than fresh coconut.

Does any merchant in the District sell Audubon bird prints or bird prints suitable for framing? If so, who? I want to make a pair of candle holders of clear plastic. What is the process for working with plastics, tools needed and how are edges buffed? D. M. B.

You may purchase bird prints suitable for framing from a book store on F st., which also carries maps, prints, as well as books. Look in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

Did you see the article on working with plastics in the Sunday, June 1, issue of The Washington Post (page 6, Section V)? That article covered the subject much more completely than I have the space to do here. For further help go to a Hobby Store in Georgetown which carries the plastic kits mentioned in the article.

Please repeat procedure for removing cigarette burn from a blond mahogany dresser.

Light surface burns sometimes will disappear if the spot is rubbed with the polish ordinarily used, followed by rubbing with a flannel polishing cloth. Or mix rottenstone or powdered pumice with lemon oil to a creamy paste. Apply with soft cloth, rubbing in a circular motion. Wipe up immediately with cloth dampened with lemon oil. Wipe dry with clean soft cloth. Rub with flannel polishing cloth. If this doesn't help, refinishing is required.

Winkler—Volland

Decorated with palms and white snapdragons, Emory Methodist Church was the setting yesterday for the wedding of Miss Doris Jeannette Volland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer A. Volland, this city, and Carl Thomas Winkler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl S. Winkler, also of Washington. The Rev. Edgar Beery officiated.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore an embroidered white taffeta gown with sweetheart neckline, long sleeves and full skirt.

Del Ankers

MRS. CARL T. WINKLER
. . . will reside here

Her finger-tip veil was attached to a seed pearl band and her bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Wearing a hoop-skirted gown of pink marquisette and carrying spring flowers, Miss Frances Garvin acted as maid of honor. Miss Peggy Young and Miss Betty Lee, bridesmaids, were in aqua marquisette, with bouquets of red roses. Henry C. Saylor was best man and ushers were John T. Billhimer, Barry Shields, Henry Weeks, jr., and Robert F. Cooper.

After a New York honeymoon, the couple will reside in Washington. The bridegroom is a junior at the University of Maryland.

MacDonald—Billings

The marriage of Miss Emmel Louise Billings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Emmel Billings of Takoma Park, Md., and John Keith MacDonald, son of Mrs. Neva MacDonald and the late J. A. MacDonald of Washington and Detroit, took place June 2 in a double ring ceremony in the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Dr. R. Paul Schearrer officiated at the ceremony.

The bride wore a street length blue crepe frock trimmed in rhinestones and a colonial net bonnet to match. She carried a nosegay of pink rosebuds and blue delphinium. Mr. Billings gave his daughter in marriage.

Miss Polly Billings was her sister's only attendant, wearing a gold crepe dress with green accessories, and carrying a nosegay of talisman roses. Sam Weiss served as best man and the ushers were Roy MacGruder and Robert Francis Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald went to New York on their honeymoon and will reside in Detroit.

Biskar—Bulman

In Beth Sholom Synagogue yesterday, Miss Zelda Bulman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Colman Bulman this city, was married to Aaron Biskar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rosenthal, also of Washington. Rabbi Harry Silvertone officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin and fingertip veil held by a coronet of seed pearls. She carried white orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Phyllis Mendelsohn, matron of honor, was costumed in chartreuse crepe with a bouquet of purple flowers. The bridesmaids, attired in dusty rose and light blue, were Miss Phyllis Biskar, Miss Janice Bregman, Miss Ada Biskar, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Carol Zinnamon, cousin of the bride. All carried old-fashioned bouquets.

Sachrach

MRS. AARON BISKAR
. . . married in synagogue

Marvin Biskar served his brother as best man, and ushers were Herbert Heft, Alan Sahm, Morris Biskar and Irwin Domsky. Following a reception in the ballroom of the synagogue, the couple left for a wedding trip to Lake Champlain.

The bride is a graduate of Marjorie Webster Junior College, and her husband, a student at George Washington University, previously attended Northwestern University.

Miss Lillian Ruth Littman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Littman, and Jack Berman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Berman were married yesterday in the Adas Israel Congregation. The ceremony at 1 p. m. was performed by Rabbi Metz and a reception followed.

After a wedding trip in the Pocono Mountains the couple will make their home in Washington.

Girl Scout Camp Opens June 26 In Shenandoah

The early American theme will be featured in this summer's camping program at Girl Scout Camp May Flather which will open June 26. The camp is located in the North River Gap of the George Washington National Forest, a section of the Shenandoah Mountains.

One of the handicraft projects at the camp will be lessons in weaving mats, scarfs, knitting bags, and pocketbooks on large, hand-made wooden looms which are threaded and cared for each year by women residents of that region. American folk songs, square dances and dramatics will be included in the summer program, according to Mrs. J. Mitchell, chairman. A lodge room will be reserved for an early American household collection.

The Camp May Flather camping period, June 26 to August 28, is divided into three, three-week sessions. The camp can accommodate 135 girls each session.

Harrison—Dorfman

Mrs. Mary Harrison of Dorchester, Mass., announces the engagement of her daughter, Mildred, to Milton S. Dorfman, son of Mrs. Hattie Dorfman of Washington. The wedding will take place on Dorchester in the early fall.

Doukas—Vidos

St. Sophia's Greek Orthodox Church was the setting for the wedding yesterday of Miss May Anna Vidos, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Vidos, and Harry Michael Doukas, son of Michael Doukas and the late Mrs. Doukas, which took place at 4 p. m. with the Rev. G. Psallidakis officiating.

The bride's father gave her in marriage. She wore a white sheer crepe gown trimmed in seed pearls and a ruching of illusion held the illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

MRS. HARRY M. DOUKAS
. . . church ceremony

Mrs. Nicholas Pattakos, matron of honor, wore a strawberry pink gown and carried a cascade bouquet of blue delphinium. The bridesmaids, Miss Irene Edwards, Miss Mary Psarakis and Miss Mary Stefanakis, were in blue sheer crepe gowns and carried cascade bouquets of pink gladioli.

Andrew Louzis served as best man and the ushers were Louis Rosenbloom, John Doukas and Dino Vidos.

Areception at the American Legion hall followed the ceremony. After a wedding trip to Miami Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Doukas will return to Washington to make their home. The bridegroom is a graduate of Maryland University.

Visiting School Friend

Miss Margaret Waller of Edgemoor, Md., who graduated last week from the Madeira School, has had as her guests the Misses Dorothea St. Charles, Carolyn Tucklingham and Lupine Howard of the junior class of the school.

Drs. Marland Entertain at Julep Party

Bachelor hosts yesterday were Dr. Albert Edward Marland, jr., and Dr. Jackson Thorne Marland, who entertained at a julep party at their home on Forest Lane.

The doctors "prescribed" for their guests a mixture of aromatic elixir of flowers, nourishment and spiritus frumenti to be taken with strains of music in sufficient quantity. The cause for celebration was a dual one, for Dr. Albert Marland is finishing his internship at Gallinger Hospital and Dr. Jack Marland is leaving to begin his internship at St. Luke's Hospital, New York.

Among those invited were the Misses Edwina Pou Wadden, Jane Lingo, Joan Exnicios, Ann Distler, Gwenda Pryse, Romona North, Ann Gillespie, Emily and Betty Arnold and Jeanne Hoover. Also among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. Al Manning, Gallatin De Knox, Clarence Norment with his fiancee Nancy Richards; Grahame Smallwood, Bob Werlich, Allan Jones, Marvin Braverman, and the Misses Virginia and Elizabeth Baker.

Coast Guard Unit To Attend Picnic

Members of the Washington Unit, Coast Guard Welfare, will attend a picnic being held tomorrow at 12:30 p. m., on the grounds of Mrs. Joseph A. Farley's home, Seminary Hill, Alexandria.

The final monthly business meeting of the season will be held at this time. Plans for continuing work for the Children's Hospital throughout the summer will be discussed.

Mrs. Rutherford B. Lank, jr., chairman, will preside at the meeting. Other officers are Mrs. Chester A. Anderson, vice chairman; Mrs. Aden C. Unger, secretary, and Mrs. Frank T. Kenner, treasurer.

Air Forces Woman's Club Slates Annual Picnic

The Air Forces Woman's Club will conclude the season with a picnic at noon Wednesday in the garden of the residence of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Bert Hovey at Bolling Field. In case of rain, the party, which will be preceded by election of officers, will be held in the Officers' Club.

Lady Iris Entertains; Other Fetes Held

By Marie McNair

Lady Iris Mountbatten, great-granddaughter of England's Queen Victoria, gathered her friends in yesterday for cocktails; Gen. and Mrs. Ira Eaker were being sped on their way westward at a farewell party at the Mayflower, and Capt. Joseph Y. Dreisonstok, USN, and Mrs. Dreisonstok, were entertaining just "for instance" yesterday, at their home in Chevy Chase. This was all by way of making Sunday afternoon a merry one in spite of the rain for party-loving folk in this party-loving town.

Slim, tall and golden-haired Lady Iris is now a member of the firm of Don Pallini Studio of Dance with headquarters in New York. She's in town frequently, however, to look in at the studio on Connecticut ave., and it was there that she held fete yesterday.

Mrs. Cafritz Dances

Lady Iris lets it be known she's not a song-and-dance girl. Her job is to open a new studio—like the one that's to make its advent in Philadelphia—and move from city to city to check on the already going establishments.

There was music, and Don Pallini himself as a dance partner. There was a bar set up in a sort of sun room, and between raindrops guests wandered out on the little terrace which adjoins.

In a smart tobacco-brown draped faille frock with heavy gold jewelry, Lady Iris moved from group to group yesterday; watching graceful Mrs. Morris Cafritz on the dance floor; chatting with Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Claude Beddington and Peter Ansberry. Mrs. Ansberry was there, too, in a cocktail-length black frock and ballet slippers, her blond hair waved to her shoulders.

Mrs. Emil Hurja came in, was soon off to Miss Meredith Howard's cocktail party for Jean Hersholt of movie fame, and Mrs. Hersholt; Mrs. Frank Morrow was about to call a moratorium on parties for the day, and Mrs. James Souby was of the same frame of mind.

Miss Bertha Joseph was hatless, her graying hair framing her face, and others there were Mr. and Mrs. Ken Watson, pretty Miss Dolly Corbin, Deane Rucker, Mme. Marcel Ancher and Nathan Bartlett.

Royce Powells There

At Capt. and Mrs. Dreisonstok's pleasant party I met Mr. and Mrs. Royce Powell, who had been to Mr. and Mrs. George Vournas' barbecue supper for Representative Sam Rayburn, were going on to Lady Iris Mountbatten's fete.

Although there were a good many Navy people in the gathering, the men seemed to prefer their cooler, more comfortable civilian clothes.

Vice Admiral and Mrs. E. F. Cochrane were there, and Vice Admiral and Mrs. Charles Lockwood, Rear Admiral J. J. Manning, and Mrs. Mannin, and Capt. William H. Watson, and Mrs. Watson. Others who had been asked were John Steelman, Assistant to the President, and Mrs. Steelman; Gen. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan, Gen. and Mrs. Leslie Groves, Capt. and Mrs. William Brockman, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper.

On the sun porch I glimpsed Col. Gerald Lambert of the French Army, and Mrs. Lambert; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Witt—she had taken her turn at the tea table; Comdr. and Mrs. Frank Cahill, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Krebs, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Solbirg, and Mrs. E. H. Ingalls. In crisp whites was the hosts' young son, Cadet Thomas Dreisonstok, home from West Point for the first time in a year. And in his honor there was a huge heavily iced cake in the dining room with "welcome home" spun in sugar.

Town Talk—

Georgetown's Defenders 'Understand' But Won't Forgive Those Who Desert

By Eva Hinton

WHEN the Walter Lippmanns asked friends for cocktails the other afternoon it was really their goodby for this season. They will be heading for Bar Harbor soon, with a trip to Europe a probability in the fall.

A former neighbor, who resided near them when they lived in Georgetown, walked through their impressive drawing room to the shady terrace outside, looked at the garden below and the wonderful view of the Washington Cathedral, and then, after a moment's reflection, said:

"Well, now I can understand how you could bear to leave Georgetown."

"So you forgive us?" beamed Mr. Lippmann, who is amiable and likes to be on friendly terms with everyone.

"No," replied the staunch proponent of Georgetown's charms, "forgiveness is too much for you to expect. But I do understand.

In the congenial group on the terrace were the Cuban Ambassador and his senora wearing lacy summer black. Mme. Wellington Koo, wearing over her simple dress a jacket—a perfect product of the weaver's green lace and brocaded in a green lame and brocaded in a art. It was of the palest sea-pattern of little fish.

WHILE waiting for his lady to finish an absorbing conversation with British newsman Victor Gordon-Lenox, Sir John Magowan, the British Minister, was giving me his priceless formula for improving one's golf score. He invented the formula over the recent holiday week-end while collecting a handsome sun tan.

"You see," he explained, "it was my putting! I'd been fixing my feet just so, doing little sighting swings with my putter, squinting for a line on the hole, and then MISSING it. I got tired of this, so I said to myself, 'Just walk up and hit it into the hole!' and I did, every time!"

Mr. and Mrs. James Hendrick brought their pretty daughter, Alice, to the Lippmanns' party. Alice, vacationing from Foxcroft School, has been designated by a local swain as the girl with the most delightful freckles.

THE Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Edward Foley jr. arrived together. She was wearing the best-looking black dress with touches of white pique, and an upturned black sailor sprinkled with rhinestones.

Also present were Mrs. Alexander Smith, Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Mrs. Lister Hill and Mrs. Brien McMahon, all accompanied by their Senator husbands.

Mrs. Clinton Anderson, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, was conducted into the garden by Mrs. Lippmann to meet Cognac and Colbert, two black French poodle pups. The puppies' mother, Courage, was living up to her name by lying under everyone's feet without fear of being stepped on.

Among the Lippmanns' guests, thoughtfully stepping around the dog, were the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Bruggmann, Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, Alfred Friendly with his ravishing blond wife, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Paul Wooton, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, the Arnauld Waplers, Mme. Henri Claudel and Drew Dudley.

Winships Have Son

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Winship of Arlington, Va., announce the birth of a son, Laurence Parker Winship, on June 1. The grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. A. Sprague Coolidge of Cambridge, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Laurence L. Winship of Sudbury, Mass.

Jean Hersholt, Movie Star, Guest of Honor

By Elizabeth Maguire

A congenial way to spend a rainy Sunday afternoon was found at the cocktail party given by Miss Meredith Howard yesterday at her apartment in 2500 Q st. Guests of honor, radio and movie star Jean Hersholt and Mrs. Hersholt, are in town for a few days, and about 70 dropped in to say hello between 5:30 and 8 o'clock.

Miss Howard wore a print of turquoise and white, and Mrs. Hersholt was smartly costumed in black with white lace accents. Staying in the Lauritz Melchior suite at the Raleigh reminds Mrs. Hersholt that at one time her husband and Lauritz Melchior and William Knudsen all lived in the same block in Copenhagen, Denmark. They met each other for the first time, however, after each became famous in America.

The Undersecretary of War, Kenneth Royall, was in the gathering, looking well tanned from Sunday afternoon spent on the golf course. Mrs. Royall, who wore becoming emerald green with white and green straw hat, said they were off for a sail down the river on the Sequoia, yacht of the Secretary of Navy James Forrestal.

The Military Attache of Guatemala and Senora de Momales Lopez chatted with Comdr. Julian Becton and Ardoin Casgrain, and former Acting Director of the National Committee on Atomic Information, and Mrs. Casgrain. Mrs. Casgrain wore a fetching hat made of a rose corsage trimmed with tulle.

Associate Justice and Mrs. Harold H. Burton came down the hall late in the afternoon, having ducked raindrops to go to one or two other parties beforehand. They were greeted halfway by the departing Mrs. Parker Dove and Representative and Mrs. Estes Kefauver.

Among other guests at the party were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Steel, Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon, Danish Counselor Povl Bang-Jensen, Danish Counselor and Mme. Bertelsen, the Assistant Naval Attache of the Soviet Embassy and Mme. Pravdiuk, Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker, Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Marshall R. Greer, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris and Thomas Philips Morgan.

Rep. Rayburn At Mastiha

Mr. and Mrs. George Vournas made a last minute shift yesterday for their annual "mastiha" in honor of former Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, and asked their guests to the Silver Fox on Wisconsin ave.

The party was to have been held at Callithea Farm, the Vournas country place near Seneca, Md., but the storm Saturday night played havoc with the grounds.

"Mastiha" in Greek means an unregimented social gathering, and usually guests spent the afternoon doing farm chores or just relaxing in a chair on the lawn. A whole lamb is turning on the spit during the afternoon hours to be ready for the barbecue supper that ends the day.

Among Representative Rayburn's Texas colleagues who were there yesterday were Attorney General and Mrs. Tom Clark, Representative and Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, Representative and Mrs. Albert Thomas, Representative and Mrs. Ewing Thomason, Representative and Mrs. Eugene Worley.

Others were Representative and Mrs. Carl Stefan, Aniz Azer, Egyptian Minister; Senator Warren Magnuson, Commissioner and Mrs. Guy Mason.

Lieut. Gen. Eaker At Farewell

Lieut. Gen. Ira Eaker, retiring deputy commander of AAF, and Mrs. Eaker were honor guests at the Aeronautical Training Society's reception yesterday, 5:30 to 7:30 p. m., in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower Hotel.

Also invited were Gen. and Mrs. Carl Spaatz, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Lieut. Gen. P. T. Mow, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert M. Webster, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frederick Anderson, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. James A. Mollison, Brig. Gen. William W. Welsh, Col. and Mrs. Monro MacCloskey, Col. Jacob Smart, Col. Joseph I. Green, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Joseph S. Edgerton and Maj. Bernard Peters.

Owens Farewell Party Also Celebrates Birthday

Dr. and Mrs. Philip Owen entertained at cocktails yesterday afternoon "from 6 on" as a farewell to party to Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Swigart and also to celebrate Ruth Swigart's birthday. Mr. and Mrs. Swigart are in the center of a round of entertainments before they leave next week for North Port Point, Mich., later to go to Cincinnati, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Richardson Spencer came up from Berryville, Va., for the fete. Others among the 50 or so guests were Mr. and Mrs. Theodore W. Dominick, Mr. and Mrs. Philip G. Strong, Mr. and Mrs. W. John Kenney, Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Cushing, Col. and Mrs. Frederick Lee, Mr. and Mrs. James G. Crowley, Mr. and Mrs. H. Chapman Rose, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. John McClintock, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McClintock, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Porter, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Meikle.

So. Africa 'Highly Explosive'

By the United Press

The Foreign Policy Association said last night that, because of the "deep-seated social tensions" between its native and European populations, the Union of South Africa potentially is "a highly explosive nation."

In a report prepared by its British Commonwealth expert, Grant S. McClellan, the association said that native leadership is beginning to emerge in the union and that, before long, the natives may be able to challenge the Europeans who now control their country.

McClellan said there is lack of harmony between the natives—Negroes and Indians—and the Europeans.

"In an area where the non-European population outnumbers that of European stock by nearly five to one, fundamental cleavages are to be expected," he said. He added that the future of the union depends on the ability of the two groups to resolve differences."

He said that, in trying to resolve these tensions, the Europeans should bear in mind that they are dependent, to a great extent, upon the native population.

"The vast mineral wealth of South Africa can only be exploited through the employment of African labor," he said. "South Africa's agricultural resources can only be harvested by African workers.

Traffic in Opium Rising Since 1944

By the United Press

The traffic in prepared opium has been rising since 1941, after reaching an all-time low in 1940, Harry Anslinger, Federal Narcotics Commissioner, said last night in his 1946 report.

Seizures last year amounted to 4498 ounces, compared with 1024 in 1940, he said.

There was not much change in morphine traffic, compared with the previous year, but traffic in marihuana "continued to be an increasingly serious problem."

Bulk marihuana seizures totaled 10,361 ounces against only 4533 ounces in 1945. Marihuana cigarette seizures were about two thirds of the total of the previous year.

Seizures at the borders, especially on the Mexican border, were up sharply, however. The aggregate weight of seizures at borders and ports was 22,471 ounces, compared with 9567 ounces in 1945.

Harp, Flute and Viola Happily Joined in Gallery Concert

Mozart-D'Antalffy: Sonata; Bax: Elegiac Trio; Forst: Trio; Gretchaninoff: Bachkiria; Debussy: Sonata. Sylvia Meyer, harp, Britton Johnson, flute, Abe Cherry, viola. Sunday evening, National Gallery.

By Paul Hume

The East Garden Court of the National Gallery hears much music in a year, but little that seemed as uniquely congenial as that played on the harp, flute, and viola last night.

The music was as unfamiliar as the combination of sounds. It was, with one exception, music which can only be heard when those three instruments are gathered together, and that only happens on rare occasions. The one exception, Mozart's violin-viola duo concertante, opened the program in an arrangement by D'Antalffy, a New York organist and arranger. The transfer was a successful one from the standpoint of giving Mozart's lines to instruments capable of reproducing them without serious alteration. It was a pleasant beginning for an evening otherwise devoted to specimens of twentieth century writing.

Though one may be partial to the music of Arnold Bax, whose Elegiac Trio received its Washington premiere last night, his rhapsodic writing did not make as deep an impression as the trio of Rudolf Forst, an American violinist and composer. In the Forst, rhythmic devices stood out more clearly and the color of the three instruments was more fully exploited. It was particularly interesting to observe the change in character of the flute as it descended into its lowest reaches. Johnson played throughout the evening with perfect control and sweetest tone. Abe Cherry's viola is known in Washington for its persuasive handling, all of which stood out as he mingled with his unusual companions. As for the consistently beautiful work of Sylvia Meyer, whether she is playing with the National Symphony, or in solo and ensemble roles, it must be said that she commands her bewitching instrument with superb art. Joined by Johnson, she made the Gretchaninoff Bachkiria as fascinating a bit of color and rhythm as the trees of the court have swayed to in ages. The audience seemed as spellbound as it is polite to be in listening to music today.

Wife Follows Lawyer In N. Y. Death Plunge

New York, June 8 (U.P.).—A well-to-do lawyer jumped from his eighteenth floor penthouse apartment in Greenwich Village today and five minutes later, after looking at his crushed body, his wife leaped out the same window and joined him in death.

Police identified the couple as Horace S. Marshall and his lawyer-wife Amelie, both about 35 years old. Both were practicing attorneys and Marshall was a member of the law firm of Winthrop, Stinson, Putnam & Roberts.

Here's a Tip On How To Stay Young

THE TIES THAT BIND

Eighteen years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Francis S. Browne, of 1501 Farragut st. nw., accompanied a group that visited the old folks at Blue Plains.

The group has long since changed its plans—but the Brownes are still regular visitors. On the second Sunday of each month, you'll find them at Blue Plains, trying to make life a bit brighter for others.

Sometimes they take along fruit (it takes 65 dozen bananas to go around), sometimes they bring a pianist or other entertainer, sometimes it's new ties for the menfolks.

Browne

Mr. Browne collects the ties from contributors, cleans and presses those that are still presentable, and then takes them to Blue Plains for distribution.

He's 76 now, but you'd never guess it from the inexhaustible energy he puts into being a good neighbor.

I talked to him for half an hour about other people—but I could never get him to talk about himself.

STREET SCENE

Paul Jaquette, of 2873 South Abingdon st., Arlington, Va., reports this one:

Coming in from Glen Echo, the streetcar stopped for a man who carried a white cane. Realizing that the passenger was blind, the operator hopped down and said, "Here, let me give you a hand."

The blind man was carefully led to a seat, and asked where he wanted to get off. He was going to Georgetown University Hospital.

When we got to the hospital, the motorman stopped his car, again took his passenger by the hand, and helped him to the street.

It warmed our hearts to see such kindness and consideration. But then we got a rude shock.

As the blind man started for the sidewalk, a shiny new convertible came zipping around the corner. It whizzed past the blind man with inches to spare, but the driver didn't seem in the least perturbed.

"YETS DANCE, CHILLUN"

Gordon Calvert, president of the Roosevelt High School Alumni Association, is trying to round up all the graduates of that institution for a dance.

It's to be held at the Washington Hotel on June 16, and it will be the first Roosevelt alumni dance since the war.

Mr. Calvert writes, "We'd appreciate your mentioning this affair in your column, because we don't have current addresses for some of these graduates. Many of the girls married, and changed their names of course."

Of course. It's one of the most persistent of female traits.

END

MOOD MUSIC

Here's a letter with which I'm in complete sympathy:

"The misuse of 'mood music' in modern movies is making a cross-word puzzle fan of me. According to current techniques, there must be music in the background for every tender love scene, for every scene with a dramatic punch, and for every scene that's potentially filled with breath-taking suspense.

"Don't accuse me of having a tin ear; I'm a professional musician. But I'm also a realist. And I don't see how the hero can tip-toe into the house at 3 a. m. without waking his wife, if there's a 60-piece orchestra accentuating his every step."

END

LET THERE BE LIGHTS

Robert M. Balkam, of 3600 Connecticut ave. nw., points out a traffic hazard that should be of interest to our City Fathers.

When you're traveling west on Michigan ave., it's almost impossible to see the traffic light at North Capitol st. until you're almost in the intersection. (Too much foliage blocking the view.)

Eliminating the danger before there's an accident may save somebody's life. How about it, fellows?

GIVE-AWAYS

"Gentle dog, two years old" can be reached at DUpont 8640 after 7 p. m.

IS THIS CRICKET?

Automan Fred Alber, of 3418 9th st. ne., was witness to an unusual brush with the law the other night.

It seems a neighbor's doorbell started to ring in the middle of the night, and the neighbor turned on some house lights while he tried to find the short-circuit.

While the search continued, a station-wagon drove up in front of the house, and a man and woman alighted.

They started across the lawn toward the house, but halfway there the woman tripped on a croquet wicket and fell to the ground.

Her irate husband called the cops, who ruled that the croquet wickets had to be removed at once. Very dangerous.

As the weary householder complied with the order, he asked pensively. "What were you people doing on my lawn to begin with?"

"We saw the lights," was the reply, "and we thought this was a tourist home. We're looking for a room."

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q♡.

Here's the correct way to handle today's hand.

Declarer covers the heart queen with the king. East's ace comes up and is trumped. South takes the ace, king of spades, drawing trumps, trumps the three of hearts and cashes his three top clubs, but West shows out on the third round. Next South ruffs the fourth club in dummy.

Now declarer leads the nine of hearts from the board, and when East follows small he discards the five of diamonds. West is in with the heart ten, and he has no way to get out. If he continues a heart, declarer will ruff in dummy and discard the diamond queen. If he shifts to a diamond, South will win the diamond queen and ace.

Either way, South makes six spades, losing the ten of hearts.

A GREAT STORE IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

IDAHO . . . The gem state

● IDAHO . . . Whose sons and daughters applied their ingenuity to Nature's gifts and developed a great agricultural center . . . mining industry . . . and vacation-land.

● IDAHO . . . Rich in historical lore . . . whose Sacajawea, the Indian maiden, led the Lewis and Clark Expedition on their Westward explorations . . . where Indian tribes still gather for ancient ceremonial rituals.

● IDAHO . . . Whose agriculture thrives because of rich soil and an extensive irrigation system . . . third largest investment in irrigation in the United States. Keystone to the system is famed Arrowrock Dam.

● IDAHO . . . "Gold in them thar hills" . . . more than $100,000,000 worth taken from the Boise Basin . . . rich also in other minerals . . . the largest lead and silver mines in the world at Kellogg . . . most productive United States source of antimony at Stibnite . . . also yielding zinc, copper and tungsten.

● IDAHO . . . America's "big Switzerland" . . . land of geographical "believe-it-or-nots." Soshone Falls on the Snake River, forty-six feet higher than Niagara Falls. Hell's Canyon, far deeper than the Grand Canyon. Borah Peak, the ninth highest point of elevation in the United States . . . the wierd and awe-inspiring Craters of the Moon, Pa-Hoe-Hoe Lava Fall . . . cedar trees rivalling the Redwoods of California.

● IDAHO . . . Truly a sportsman's haven . . . whose natural facilities are developed for fullest enjoyment. Sun Valley offers winter sports the year round, and at the same time, boasts outdoor swimming in warm-water pools. Lake Pend Oreilled . . . habitat of the largest recorded trout in the world, often weighing thirty pounds and more, with an insatiable appetite for your bait.

● IDAHO . . . Whose rich endowment of Nature is equalled only by the vigor and achievements of her people.

Idaho, from the Indian term "Edah Hoe," means "The Mountain Gem," and even the briefest visit reveals how appropriate this name is for our Native State. Discovering Idaho has been one of the most thrilling experiences awaiting the traveller since its first exploration by Lewis and Clark. Nowhere else in the world, we sincerely believe, can there be found such a variety of scenery or climate . . . lofty mountains, cataracts, canyons, crystal lakes, magnificent forests, fertile valleys. Complementing the great natural resources of the State is the dynamic, progressive spirit of her people, reflecting that demand for a better way of life so characteristic of Idaho's pioneers. As early as 1896, Idaho adopted woman suffrage. Idaho's economic prosperity, based originally on gold, has continued to flourish due to her agricultural development, after overcoming the lack of water, through extensive irrigation projects . . . a triumph of man over nature. Idahoans in Washington, through the generous courtesy of The Hecht Company, extend this invitation to visit our beautiful State where the grand scale of Nature's architecture is itself an inspiration of confidence in America.
